Sail Plane of Dale
Flier, 26, Falls
150 Feet

WINGS COLLAPSE

Amateur Birdman Had Set State Gliding Record Two Weeks Ago

Harvey Blue, Jr., 26-year-old Dale flier, enthusiast who only two weeks ago established a new Wisconsin record for remaining in the air in a glider, crashed to his death yesterday afternoon on Lake Winnabago near High Cliff when the glider in which he was trying a flight folded up about 150 feet in the air.

Walter Haufe of Neenah, with whom Blue had made many experimental flights, was soaring above in another glider when Blue's machine cracked up and fell like a plummet on the ice. The young man was pronounced dead upon the arrival of a physician about 20 minutes later.

The flier had just taken off and had traveled only a short distance when suddenly the wings folded upward and the machine nosed into the ice. Witnesses said the rope by which the glider was towed along the ice before taking off was still attached to the machine.

It was Blue's first flight of the afternoon. Haufe had been in the air several minutes and had reached a relatively high altitude when Blue seated himself in the cockpit of his glider and signalled the towing automobile to get underway. The machine was pulled a few hundred feet and slowly lifted off the ice, but when it got to a height of about 100 feet, the wings folded and the machine began to level off, and a moment later the wings cracked off.

Had Made Glider
Blue was in the glider he had made and sold to Ross Bennett, Neenah. Bennett was driving the towing car when the crash occurred about 4 1/2 in the afternoon.

It was about two weeks ago that Blue set the state gliding record in a home-made glider by staying in the air for 9 hours and 50 minutes in the High Cliff area. Blue also was an airplane pilot and about a year ago escaped with minor injuries when his home-constructed plane crashed into a barn at his father's farm.

When Blue set the state gliding record, he bettered a mark of 7 hours established by Haufe by 2 hours and 50 minutes. His new mark also more than doubled his previous record of 4 hours and 15 minutes. In his record flight, the young man reached an altitude of 1,100 feet and piloted his frail craft along High Cliff ridge over an area of 4 1/2 miles.

Sought U. S. Record
Blue said at the time that he was after the United States sail plane record of 21 hours but the wind failed and he had to land. He offered, flew weekends at High Cliff when wind currents were rising and attracted many motorists to the scene.

Sheriff Gerhard Jensen, Chilton, and Dr. J. J. Minahan, Calumet county coroner, investigated the accident yesterday afternoon, and said no inequity would be held.

Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Blue, Sr. Dale; a brother, William, Dale; three sisters, Mrs. Herman School and Miss Lulu Blue, Dale; and Mrs. Theodore Holmstrom, Neenah.

Funeral services will be held at 1:30 Thursday afternoon at Sommers Funeral home, Hortonville. Burial will be in the Pine Grove cemetery, Dale.

Find Conditions Don't Warrant Higher Wages

Milwaukee — (P) — For the third successive year Milwaukee's 775 union coal truck drivers have voted against asking wage increases because conditions in the local industry do not warrant it.

George J. Richter, secretary-treasurer of the Coal and Ice Drivers and Helpers union (A.F.L.), said that because of the decision a contract with about 280 county dealers would continue in force.

550,000 Moved as Result of Treaty,
Finns Tell League

Geneva — (P) — Finland's first note to the League of Nations describing her reconstruction needs today said 550,000 persons were moved from their homes because of the war and its settlement.

Fifty-five per cent of these were children and 30 per cent women, the note declared, pointing out they constituted about one-fifth of Finland's population and saying they needed food and clothing supplies which Finland could not give them unsaid.

In the war zone outside of the area finally ceded to Russia 4,500 dwellings were destroyed, leaving 30,000 homeless, Finland said.

No accurate estimate has been made yet of the orphans and widows left by the war, but the note placed Finnish war casualties at 15,000 killed and 40,000 wounded.

From the Karelian isthmus, ceded to Russia, there were 200,000 refugees alone.

Heart Disease Claims Life of William Horlick

Son of Malted Milk Concern Founder Succumbs
At Racine Home

Racine — (P) — William Horlick, Jr., 65, son of the late malted milk manufacturer, died at his home here this morning of a heart attack. He had been ill with the flu, and complications affected his heart.

Horlick and his brother, A. J., had headed the malted milk company since the death of their father, Colonel William Horlick, in 1938.

The brothers and their late sister, Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley, were major beneficiaries in the estimated $17,000,000 fortune left by the senior Horlick.

Colonel Horlick, an immigrant from England, came to Racine in 1873, and here originated his malted milk formula and founded an extensive plant. During his life he was known for his many philanthropies and his industrial activities. He died at the age of 90.

Born in Chicago
William, Jr., and his father had been financially interested in a number of scientific ventures in addition to their private philanthropies. They were personal friends of Admiral Richard E. Byrd among the supporters of his arctic expeditions.

William, Jr., was born in Chicago Dec. 12, 1875, and was educated at the University of Wisconsin.

Expect Relief In Flood Zones

Clear and Cooler Weather
Indicates Waters Will
Recede Soon

By the Associated Press
Widely-separated sections of the nation were inundated today by spring floods which took lives, clearing skies and cooler temperatures for the most part gave promise of early relief.

Central and eastern Pennsylvania cities along the Susquehanna, Allegheny and Monongahela rivers, the hardest hit and crests well above flood stage were expected during the day.

South-central New York state rivers, principally the Susquehanna and Chenango, spilled from the banks from melting snow and rains, forcing hundreds of families from their homes and blocking roads.

Colder weather, however, halted the rise.

Thousands of acres of northern California farm land along the Sacramento river were covered by flood waters for the second time in a month and scores of farm families were forced to seek higher ground. Clear weather was forecast after nearly a week of heavy rains.

Six were counted dead across Pennsylvania, and four in New York.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., prepared for a 34-foot crest—four above flood stage—sometime early tomorrow. Flood control dikes, however, helped lessen the damage.

Five are Killed in Crash of Airplane

Seattle — (P) — A Sunday afternoon airplane pleasure trip ended in death for four Seattle children and a woman pilot.

The dead: Cora Sterling, 25, a flier for eight years and the first woman in Washington to receive a transport license; Janet, 8, and Charles, 4, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Taylor; and James, 10, and Allen, 14, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Taylor and cousins of the two girls.

The plane, a single-engine, four-passenger cabin plane, crashed at 180 miles an hour into a sawdust pile a half-mile from Boeing field.

British Envoys to Balkans Called Home for Consultations

London — (P) — Crucial developments in the allies' economic war against Germany are expected this week by diplomatic circles as British envoys in the Balkans hurry home for consultations and parliament prepares to reconvene after the Easter recess.

Informed quarters, assuming that the diplomats had been recalled to discuss means of strengthening the allies' position in the southeast and tightening their blockade of the rich, attached significance to the fact that a Rumanian trade delegation was expected to arrive in London at about the same time.

Some indication of how far Great Britain and France intend to go in plugging up loopholes in the blockade is expected tomorrow, when parliament meets to hear Prime Minister Chamberlain's report on the meeting of the allied war council here last Thursday.

See Strong Measures
Many observers accepted as a hint that strong measures are in the making, the speech delivered Saturday by first lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill, who warned Germany's neighbors that the allies are unwilling to accept "interference."

Pleads Guilty of Drunk Driving

Appleton Motorist Fined
$50. Costs in Municipal Court

Arthur Van Gompel, 27, 1000 West avenue, pleaded guilty of drunken driving when he appeared in municipal court of Judge Thomas H. Ryan this morning.

Judge Ryan fined the motorist $50 and costs with an alternative of 60 days in the county detention camp under both the city and state laws and said the state fine would be remitted upon payment of the city fine and costs in both actions.

Van Gompel also will have his driver's license revoked for a year.

He was arrested by city police Saturday night on N. Richmond street. It was charged he was driving in an erratic manner.

3 Big Gasoline Tanks Destroyed in Blast

Wilkes-Barre, Pa. — (P) — Three 100-gallon gasoline tanks exploded in the Wilkes-Barre flood area today, temporarily adding fuel to the hazards of rising waters already blamed for at least six deaths in other parts of Pennsylvania.

Damaged when the rising Susquehanna pierced a temporary dike, the huge tanks burst into a furious blaze and showered flaming gasoline over a quarter-mile section of the Edwardsville-Kingston district, across the river from Wilkes-Barre proper.

Dr. W. A. Grover, in charge of Red Cross rescue work, reported that no one was injured.

The blaze damaged several farm buildings, but no homes were endangered.

'Be Polite and Patient,' Hopkins Instructs 120,000 Enumerators Starting Census Tuesday

Washington — (P) — More than 120,000 census "historians" will set out tomorrow morning to write a new chapter in a chronicle of the United States which already fills 20,000 volumes.

The story they gather from 132,000,000 Americans will fill 3,800,000 pages with population facts, 2,300,000 pages with housing statistics, and millions more with inventories of 7,000,000 farms. The figures will bring a 150-year-old story up to date.

The census was delayed a day to avoid the practical jokes of All-Fool's day, but officials said the enumerators were prepared to meet ordinary front-door difficulties.

The census takers got last-minute instructions today from Secretary Hopkins, whose commerce department conducts the nationwide question and answer quiz.

"You will meet people who have been misinformed, who are confused," Hopkins said. "Give them the facts. Be polite and patient. Remember always that in three generations the census rarely has been forced to use any stronger authority than a sincere and straightforward appeal to the citizens."

The public debate over income and earnings questions, considered the census-taker's hardest "selling job," continued up to the "zero hour."

Against Hopkins' view that the census was "not an invasion" but a "cooperative enterprise of a free people," Senator Tobey (R-N.H.) broadcast a final criticism of the "personal" and searching nature of many of these census questions.

Tobey contended that the questions violate the individual's right of privacy. With "the harsh and arbitrary methods used to force this information from citizens," he said, it is "a menace to the decent living men and women of this free country."

The census bureau announced today, however, that Francis P. Mur-

WPA To Cut 700,000 From Its Rolls in Next Three Months; Relief Issue Up in Congress

Washington — (P) — On the eve of congressional study of 1940-41 relief needs, the WPA decided today to cut its rolls by about 700,000 in the next three months.

The action is designed to keep work relief expenditures within the $1,477,000,000 allotted by congress for the year ending next June 30. WPA enrollment was 2,311,400 on March 20.

Colonel F. C. Harrington, WPA Commissioner who made the announcement, will appear before the house appropriations' new relief proposals. It is generally expected that President Roosevelt will recommend a $1,000,000,000 WPA fund as proposed in his budget last January.

Colonel Harrington explained that the WPA discharges would be gradual, with the April curtailment probably limited to 200,000. Workmen will be dismissed as projects are finished, and then the least-needed projects will be eliminated.

Consideration of relief funds for the next fiscal year will be tied in with the congressional battle over economy. So far congress has cut the president's budget proposals $37,734,349, but that saving may be wiped out late this week if the senate increases house-approved funds for the navy.

The house was taking up minor legislation, but it received from the special Smith committee a majority report charging the national labor board with "overzealousness" and "predatory encroachment" on basic rights.

The 60,000-word statement was signed by Chairman Smith (D-Va.) and Representatives Halleck (R-Ill.) and Clegg (R-Mich.).

Plunges to Death in Milwaukee City Hall

Milwaukee — (P) — John Alex Gorski, 31, fell or plunged to his death from an upper-floor railing in the city hall's coffin-shaped air well today.

His body narrow missed striking a policeman and two city employees standing on the first floor under the well. Police said Gorski had worked irregularly during the last year as a coal truck driver, as a baker and on WPA.

Missing Child Found Unharmed in Illinois

Breeds, Ill. — (P) — Three-year-old Helen Louise Chenoweth was safe today, and apparently none the worse for the 48-hour disappearance from her farm home.

While search parties frantically sought the girl in a wide area, Deputy Sheriff Floyd Morse found her sleeping peacefully Saturday night in a pig lot near her home.

"A complete, accurate census for 1940 is vital. . . . This is not a partisan matter but one of deep concern to American men and women of all parties."

Consolidated figures must be reported to the president within eight months for use in congressional reapportionment, one of the principal reasons for taking the census.

Progressive Vote Is Major Factor in Tuesday's Primary

Appleton Voters Will Ballot
Tuesday on Municipal Officers,
National Convention Delegates

The electorate of Appleton will go to the polls Tuesday to ballot on candidates for municipal positions, to elect delegates to national party conventions and to vote on a referendum involving the teacher tenure law.

The polls will be opened for voting at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning and will close promptly at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Interest in the municipal election centers chiefly around the races for mayor, city engineer, city clerk, aldermanic races in the Fourth, Sixth and Fourteenth wards and the supervisory contest in the Fourth ward.

Opposing Mayor Goodland, who is seeking reelection, is Albert C. Rule, a former mayor and assessor, while two new candidates, Edward E. Sager and Miss Dorothy Leisner, are on the ticket for city clerk.

The job will be vacated May 1 by Carl J. Becker, who is retiring to enter private business. Sager is a former treasurer under the commission form of government while Miss Leisner is deputy city clerk.

Engineer's Race
The race for engineer is one that has betting circles on the run. Opposing the incumbent, Alfred W. Wickesberg, is Lloyd M. Schindler, city engineer for 11 years previous to two years when he was defeated by Wickesberg.

The Fourth ward aldermanic race has attracted city-wide attention because of the active campaigns put on by both candidates, Carl Rehfeldt, incumbent, and R. H. Kubitz, a former alderman. Rehfeldt defeated Kubitz two years ago by one vote after a re-count of ballots.

Kubitz withdrew his name from the supervisory race this year and his campaign committee appointed Fred N. Calmes whose name will appear on the ticket. Opposing Calmes will be Allen R. Solic, who came into the race last week as a sticker candidate.

In the Sixth ward, Peter Delain, incumbent, has for his opponent Harvey Kittner, a former alderman.

Picketing Case
Up in High Court
Supreme Tribunal Grants
Review to Federal Affiliate

Washington — (P) — An American Federation of Labor affiliate was granted a supreme court review today of a decision holding that picketing of Chicago stores selling milk produced in another state constituted a violation of the anti-trust laws.

Another federation affiliate was accorded a review of a national labor relations board order directing the Serrick Corporation of Muncie, Ind., to arbitrate a collective bargaining contract and to recognize a C. I. O. union.

No opinions were delivered at today's session. This postponed at least until next Monday a ruling on the justice department's anti-trust suit charging 12 major oil companies and five individuals with conspiring to raise the price of gasoline sold in ten midwestern states.

Arguments will be heard later on the cases the court agreed to review.

In the milk case a local of the milk wagon drivers union sought a review of the adverse decision by the federal circuit court at Chicago. An injunction against the picketing had been requested by Lake Valley Farm Products, Inc., a dairy which sold milk to the stores affected.

Suspect Murder
Ring in Slayings
Of Michigan Men

Body of Mechanic Recovered from Crude Grave
In Basement

Detroit — (P) — Discovery of the bullet-torn body of a young garage mechanic in a crude basement grave spurred police today in a search for "what they believed might be a 'murder-for-profit' ring."

Detectives, digging in a mound of earth under an east side house, yesterday unearthed the body of Floyd Loyst, missing since Feb. 26. Loyst had been shot twice in the back. His fingertips and hands had been burned with lye, apparently in an attempt to hinder identification.

The gruesome find recalled the unsolved torch murder of Dorsey E. Bowman, whose body was found on a dump in Macomb county Feb. 15. Bowman also had been shot in the back. His body was so badly burned that identification was possible only through dental work.

Sold Their Cars
Both men disappeared just after they had completed arrangements for selling their automobiles, which were later traced and found to have been sold for approximately $400 each. The money, police theorized, might have provided the motive behind both slayings.

Held for questioning in connection with the case was John R. Kasap, 22-year-old former taxicab driver, who surrendered voluntarily March 2 and is held on an open charge in the Macomb county jail at Mt. Clemens, Mich.

He said Kasap's failure to pay the rent on the Detroit house led to the finding of Loyst's body.

Authorities who questioned Kasap until nearly dawn this morning said he told of renting the house in conjunction with "a guy named Joe." He denied any connection with the deaths of Bowman and Loyst, they said.

Gambling and Vice Inquiry Resumed by Judge in Detroit

Detroit — (P) — Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, reinforced by a state supreme court ruling that he had the right to conduct it, today resumed examination of Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox, Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea and 33 other persons accused of a gambling and vice conspiracy.

In the offing was another grand jury proceedings perhaps even broader in scope than the one started by Judge Ferguson and his aids seven months ago.

The new grand jury will be a federal instrument. This inquiry, long rumored, may take definite shape after the arrival about the middle of this month of O. John Rogge, head of the criminal division of the department of justice.

Rogge is expected to ask for a special federal tribunal to investigate "top men" connected with past and present state administrations. This grand jury would not be confined to Wayne county as is the state grand jury over which Judge Ferguson presides.

Balloting Expected to Help Clear Up Third-
Term Question

Milwaukee — (P) — Democratic and Republican factions, facing direct tests of strength in tomorrow's state delegate election, are angling for the votes of Wisconsin's third party—the Progressives.

These votes constitute a much-sought plum in the Wisconsin balloting, to which political observers look for a key to national sentiment in two respects:

First, on the third-term question. Besides choosing among rival delegate slates, voters in the Democratic column will make a direct personal choice between President Roosevelt—entered by his supporters although he has remained silent—and Vice President Garner. There are two opposing slates pledged to a third term for the president.

Republican Contest
Second, on the Republican choice between

Badger Primary Tuesday Offers Test of Strength

Also May Indicate Effectiveness of Campaign Strategy

POLITICAL CALENDAR
Tuesday:
 Kansas — Sixty-fifth congressional district Republicans to select two delegates to national convention.
 New York — State primary to elect national convention delegates from 43 congressional districts (Democrats with 86 votes and Republicans with 84).
 Wisconsin — Presidential preference primary to elect 21 delegates to national conventions.

Thursday:
 Kansas — Republican state convention, Wichita, to select 4 delegates-at-large to national convention and confirm 14 delegates selected at district conventions.
 Maine — Republican state convention, Portland, to select 13 delegates to national convention.
Saturday:
 Arizona — Democratic state convention, Phoenix, to select 6 delegates to national convention.
 Washington, D. C. — Socialist party national convention to nominate candidates for president and vice-president.

BY D. HAROLD OLIVER
 Washington, D. C. — The Wisconsin presidential primaries tomorrow have captured the interest of politicians here for two reasons:
 1. They will provide the first test of strength of Democratic and Republican candidates at the ballot box.
 2. They mirror the campaign technique of presidential contenders, avowed and otherwise, which varies in some degree with every aspirant.
 The Democratic contest for Wisconsin's 24 congressional votes pits Vice President Garner against two states of delegates favoring President Roosevelt. The latter has won all 24 delegates selected so far in other states, where he faced virtually no opposition.
 The Republican balloting tomorrow will bring Senator Vandenberg of Michigan and Thomas E. Dewey, New York district attorney, together in their first pre-convention clash and may determine to some extent how far each goes in future primaries.

Test of Strategy
 But added interest is occasioned by the fact that the strategy employed by each candidate leading up to the Wisconsin tests reflects exactly the manner of their campaigns from the beginning of talk about 1940 politics.
 For example, president Roosevelt did nothing to discourage the filing of delegates for him nor did he withdraw his name from the preference ballot, as he could have done if he desired.

Neither the chief executive nor Garner is making any political speeches. The vice-president, however, is an avowed candidate and in each of the five primaries he has entered he has given formal consent, whether required or not. While his candidacy is out in the open, third term or not, he is leaving his campaigning to others.
 Among other Democratic contenders, Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, has entered no primaries. He has emphasized he is an "off" candidate, meaning he will withdraw in favor of Mr. Roosevelt if the latter secures renomination.

McNutt Campaign
 But McNutt has extensive organizations working for him over the country—men who say they are looking only for second choice delegates in case their first choice is the president. Wisconsin offers an illustration of this strategy. Several members of the McNutt state committee are running as delegates on one or the other of the Roosevelt slates.
 Postmaster General Farley, latest to declare his unreserved candidacy for national honors, has entered no primaries yet but is reported by supporters to be building up secondary strength in Roosevelt areas. He is now on a swing of 12 mid-western, border, and southern states for more than a dozen non-political speeches before postal gatherings.
 Farley's name will be on the Wisconsin ballot, but he is not a candidate there in the real sense of the word. One of the Roosevelt slates is known as the "Roosevelt-Farley" ticket. If it wins and the president withdraws, Farley probably would get those 24 delegates.

Dewey Active
 On the Republican side, the technique varies just as widely. Vandenberg has entered the Wisconsin and Nebraska primaries through allies by friends. He does not believe in a stumping tour. He thinks the nomination should seek the man. He is standing on his senate record, but he has made two major speeches and his organizers are in more than a score of states.
 Dewey got on the stump early and has been there periodically ever since, his last swing having been through Wisconsin and Illinois. He has entered the Illinois and Nebraska primaries next week. His organization, too, is extensive.

Senator Taft of Ohio, like Dewey, has stumped far and wide—nearly 30 states—but unlike Dewey and Vandenberg has refrained from primary contests. He is entered only in his home state primary, where he has no opposition.

April 1 Newspaper Says Hutchins Quit

Chicago — (AP) — Students at the University of Chicago were told today by the Daily Maroon, undergraduate newspaper, that President Robert Maynard Hutchins had resigned because of unfavorable reaction from his comments on football.
 April Fool's day was not mentioned by the paper in connection with the story, but the date was April 1.
 The story said a successor to Hutchins had not been made, but mentioned as a possibility Postmaster General James A. Farley, said to be an expert in "political science."
 The story concluded with the news that the French government had presented the university with its famous luxury liner, the Normandie, as a gesture of goodwill.

Illinois Federal Judge Will Hear Investment Trial

Charles G. Briggie, Springfield, Ill., Will Sit in Case

Madison — (AP) — Federal Judge Charles G. Briggie, of Springfield, Ill., has been chosen to preside in district court here next Monday at further proceedings in preparation for the trial of 11 former officers and employees of B. E. Buckman & Co., defunct Madison investment firm, charged with mail fraud and securities law violations.
 Herbert C. Hale, district court clerk, said government and defense attorneys had been notified Judge Briggie would hear arguments April 8 on a defense motion for a bill of particulars. Judge Briggie may also preside at the trial, scheduled to start May 6, but the assignment will not be made definitely until it is certain there will be no conflict with pending business in his own district, Hale added.
 Judge Briggie will be the third federal jurist who has had a part in the involved Buckman case. Judge Patrick T. Stone, of Madison, presided at preliminary bankruptcy hearings and Judge F. Ryan Duffy, of Milwaukee, handled the arraignment. Judge Stone disqualified himself for trial duty because of prior interest in the case and Judge Duffy, it was said, cannot spare the time from his work in the eastern district court.

Auditor Arrested in Sales Tax 'Shakedown'

Detroit — (AP) — State police today arrested Melvin Page, field auditor, and indicated that more arrests might follow in an investigation of the Detroit office of the sales tax division of the state tax administration.
 A warrant charging extortion was obtained for Page, who has been under questioning since Saturday.
 The formal charge against Page was the first major step since the sales tax investigation started a month ago. Governor Luren D. Dickinson ordered the probe after statements were made that Detroit sales tax irregularities might involve $500,000.
 Page is accused specifically of "shaking down" James J. Brummel, a Detroit meat market proprietor, last summer.

Circus Symbolizes Arrival of Spring

New York — (AP) — Forty-five silver-painted rail cars of the "greatest show on earth," have rolled into New York to symbolize the real, non-astronomical arrival of spring.
 After a three day trip from Ringling Brothers-Barrum and Bailey winter quarters in Sarasota, Fla., a four-hour procession of elephants, camels, zebras, horses and freshly painted red-and-gold wagons went seven miles through skyscraper canyons from the railroad yards to Madison Square Garden, where the show opens Friday.
 Forty-five more cars loaded with outdoor equipment will come north and meet the show at Baltimore about May 15 for the start of the tour "under canvas."

'GOODEST' FATHER SPARED SENTENCE

After Sam Hanft, shown here with his daughter, Clara, 5, and Erwin, 10, was sentenced in federal court in New York to a year in prison for bootlegging, court attaches found the children in the courtroom wanting to know what had become of their daddy. When Federal Judge Roosevelt heard them defend Hanft as the "goodest" in the world, he suspended sentence.

Observer Believes Allies Have Profited by General Criticism of War Policies

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE
 New York — (AP) — It would seem if one may be permitted a rather personal remark—that England and France have profited by the judgments they got recently from their parliaments and press, which charged lack of initiative in the conduct of the war.
 Britain's first Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill did begin a notable address with the depressing thought that "it seems rather hard with spring caressing the land" for England to "be bent on sterner war."
 But while the first lord spoke with lowered eyes in reminding us of the difference between the battlefield and the lovely English countryside, with its primroses and bluebells, now that "our fields and woodlands are reviving" yet he indeed "bent on sterner war."

The speech was calculated to convey an impression of confidence and determination from this striking personality, who in normal times often displays the puckish disposition of a mischievous small boy but in periods of national stress is as powerful a standby as one of his own steel battleships. He summed up the prospects in one crisp sentence, which, when all other arguments have been made, is the one that most of the military and economic experts keep constantly before them:
 "Our resources and our manpower, once they are fully developed, match and exceed those of the enemy."

Let me emphasize that none of us ever should forget that statement of universally recognized fact if we are to retain a true perspective of the trend of the war.
 Churchill and Russian Premier Molotov between them contributed a second big development over the weekend.
 In the face of Nazi efforts to strengthen the Russo-German ties and also to create a triple entente, comprising Germany, Italy and Russia, Molotov declared categorically that the Bolsheviks desire to maintain their "neutrality and refrain from participation in the war."

He even asserted that the Soviet wouldn't resort to war to regain its former province of Bessarabia from Rumania—A possibility which has been a nightmare to Europe.
 And over in London this first lord of the admiralty encouraged this attitude with:
 "It is no part of our policy to seek a war with Russia. . . . There is no need for Russia to be drawn into this struggle, unless upon the promptings of obsolete imperialist ambition she wishes to do so on her own volition. . . . Our affair is not with her."
 It is too soon to say that this means Russia is withdrawing support from Hitler, but it will not be surprising if Russo-German relations tend in that direction.
 Down in Rome a source close to the government declared emphatically that Italy is still anti-bolshevist and there is no possibility of any triple entente in the near future. That would mean Mussolini intends to continue to stick to a middle course in the war—an attitude of much benefit to the allies.
 Churchill gave the Italian attitude a pat on the back with the studied remark that Britain has no quarrel with the people of Italy.

First Need Is to Help Agriculture, Gannett Asserts

Also Wants Congress to Provide 'Dollar of Stable Purchasing Power'

Chicago — (AP) — Frank E. Gannett said today that if he were president he would consider it his "first and most important" duty to restore prosperity for the farmer.
 "Fifty-five millions of our people depend directly or indirectly on agriculture," said the Rochester, N. Y., publisher, an active candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. "You can't have a prosperous country unless you have a prosperous agriculture."
 Gannett's remarks were prepared for an appearance before the Union League club.
 "I come to you today not as just another critic of the New Deal," he said. "I say that we must have something more than criticism. We must have something constructive, something better than the New Deal."
 Then he offered an affirmative authority under mandate of congress and gave to it the task of providing for us an honest dollar, a dollar of stable purchasing power, and entrust to it the task of protecting our monetary system.
 "To solve the unemployment problem, so that every willing worker would have a job at a fair wage, I would first put into our government the same business management and sound business principles that are used in the management of any successful business. I am putting business brains and experience into government and for taking political muddlers and meddlers out of business."

The publisher recommended a constitutional amendment limiting the president's term of office to eight years. He also urged that the nation be given a "real assurance" that the United States will not go to war.
 "Unfortunately," he said, "there is doubt in many minds whether we can keep out of this European mess if President Roosevelt remains in office. . . . We Republicans must see to it that we do keep out of war."

Autopsy Fails to Show Cause of Girl's Death

Detroit — (AP) — The cause of the death of 18-year-old Charlotte Cranston Saturday during a "wild party" aboard the U. S. S. Dubuque remained a mystery today despite an autopsy by five physicians.
 Chemical analyses were ordered to clarify certain phases of the post-mortem examination.
 The physicians, agents of the federal bureau of investigation and naval officers directing the inquiry refused to comment on progress of the inquiry.
 Miss Cranston died during an all-night party on the naval reserve training vessel, which is anchored in the Detroit river at the naval armory.

Endurance Planes Are Forced Down

Harold "Whitey" Dahl Was Pilot of One; Will Try Again

Sarasota, Fla. — (AP) — An attempt by crews of three light airplanes to better the existing endurance record of 22 1/2 days of continuous flying ended abruptly last night when two of the ships were forced down by refueling and other difficulties.
 Promoter Roy Gordon said another attempt probably would be made in a few days.
 The planes had taken off at 4:57 p.m. yesterday. The first one landed at 11:05 p.m., and the second 20 minutes later.
 Gordon then directed the third craft to land. It was manned by Harold "Whitey" Dahl, the American flier once sentenced to death by Spanish insurgent General Franco, and Earl Johnson of St. Petersburg.
 Marvin Dunlavy of Bessemer, Ala., and John Cockrill of Fort Myers, were flying in one of the trouble-ridden ships and Walter Ohlrich and Eugene Ealton, both of Cleveland, Ohio, in the other.
 Both crews said their gas supply was running low and efforts to refuel satisfactorily had failed.
 Dahl's hands were burned and bruised Saturday when a rope used to hook a can of gasoline from the ground in a practice attempt was snatched from him.

 (Ind.) and Routzahn (R-Ohio). It presented arguments in support of their previous recommendations for 17 changes in the Wagner act, which include checks on board administration.
 Up To Committee
 Representatives Healey (D-Mass.) and Murdock (D-Utah), the other committee members, contended that these recommendations would seriously impair the Wagner act.
 The report will be turned over to the house labor committee, which so far has favored more limited revision of the law.
 Senator Barkley (D-Ky.) said after a White House conference today that "apparently no new legislation or suggestion for legislation" would go to congress this session, and added:
 "We still are hoping to get out of here by June 1, if not sooner."

Adjourning of congress was mentioned casually, added the Democratic leader, at the usual Monday morning meetings of President Roosevelt and congressional chiefs. Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn (D-Texas) also attended.
May Offer New Plan
 Barkley told reporters another government reorganization plan might be submitted to congress this week and that it probably would involve intra-departmental changes. He predicted it would not affect the forest service.
 No final date for adjournment can be agreed upon at this stage of congressional activities, the Kentucky said.
 The lagging economy drive suffered another setback today when senate appropriations subcommittee added $45,000,000 to the house approved bill carrying appropriation for the war department's civil functions.
 Two-thirds of the increase would be for flood control projects and the other $15,000,000 as set down for starting a new set of locks at the Panama canal.
 On the senate floor, Senator McCarran (D-Nev.) started debate in behalf of his proposal to exempt from the reciprocal trade program commodities covered by import excise taxes—coal, oil, copper and lumber.
Green Overcoat Clue
In Milwaukee Holdup
 Milwaukee — (AP) — Detective Lieut. John Niederhorn said that a youth who gave his name as Tom Tiscourt, 22, of Chicago, held up a haberdasher Saturday night with a galvanized tin "pistol."
 The shopkeeper, Joseph Rice, who said he handed over $16, told officers the robber wore a peacock green overcoat. Detectives soon spotted the youth wearing such coat.
 Niederhorn said that the Chicago an told of purchasing the "pistol" following his parole from the Port Jervis, Ill., reformatory after serving part of a term for a Chicago holdup.

Second Man on Eligible List Gets State Job

Public Service Commission Passes Over Top Man in Examination

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—The statehouse today speculated on the fate of Calmer Browy, former secretary of the Wisconsin public service commission, after the utilities body announced that a new executive would take office today.

Chairman R. W. Peterson of the commission announced over the weekend that John G. Kaiser, 45, Ripon, one of three candidates certified as eligible by the bureau of personnel, has been chosen secretary to succeed Browy.

An employee of the Wisconsin Power and Light company, Kaiser earned a grade of 72 in the civil service examination recently given. He was also given a ten point credit as a veteran's preference, which ranked him second. Browy, who has held the job for more than a year and who previously was director, rated first with a grade of 91.

Commissioner Robert Nixon, a LaFollette administration hold-over member, dissented from the decision of the Heil administration majority members, it was learned. Nixon proposed the name of Browy for the permanent appointment, but failed to receive a second. Third member of the utilities board is Wildon Whitney of Madison, who with Peterson, was appointed by Governor Heil last year.

It was considered possible that Browy may be retained on the commission payroll, probably in the examining section. He formerly held the position of junior investigator. A former Marinette and Oshkosh newspaper man, he took the commission executive job after the LaFollette reorganization bill had removed from office William M. Dunneen, since accused in court actions of malfeasance.

Kaiser is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, where he majored in agriculture. He has been a chief clerk in the Ripon office of the Wisconsin Power and Light company. He saw two years of service in the World war and has a service connected disability, Peterson reported. Born in Kenosha, Winnebago county, he was brought up and schooled in Ripon. He will receive $4,000 a year in his new job.

City School Plan Biggest Issue at Weyauwega Polls

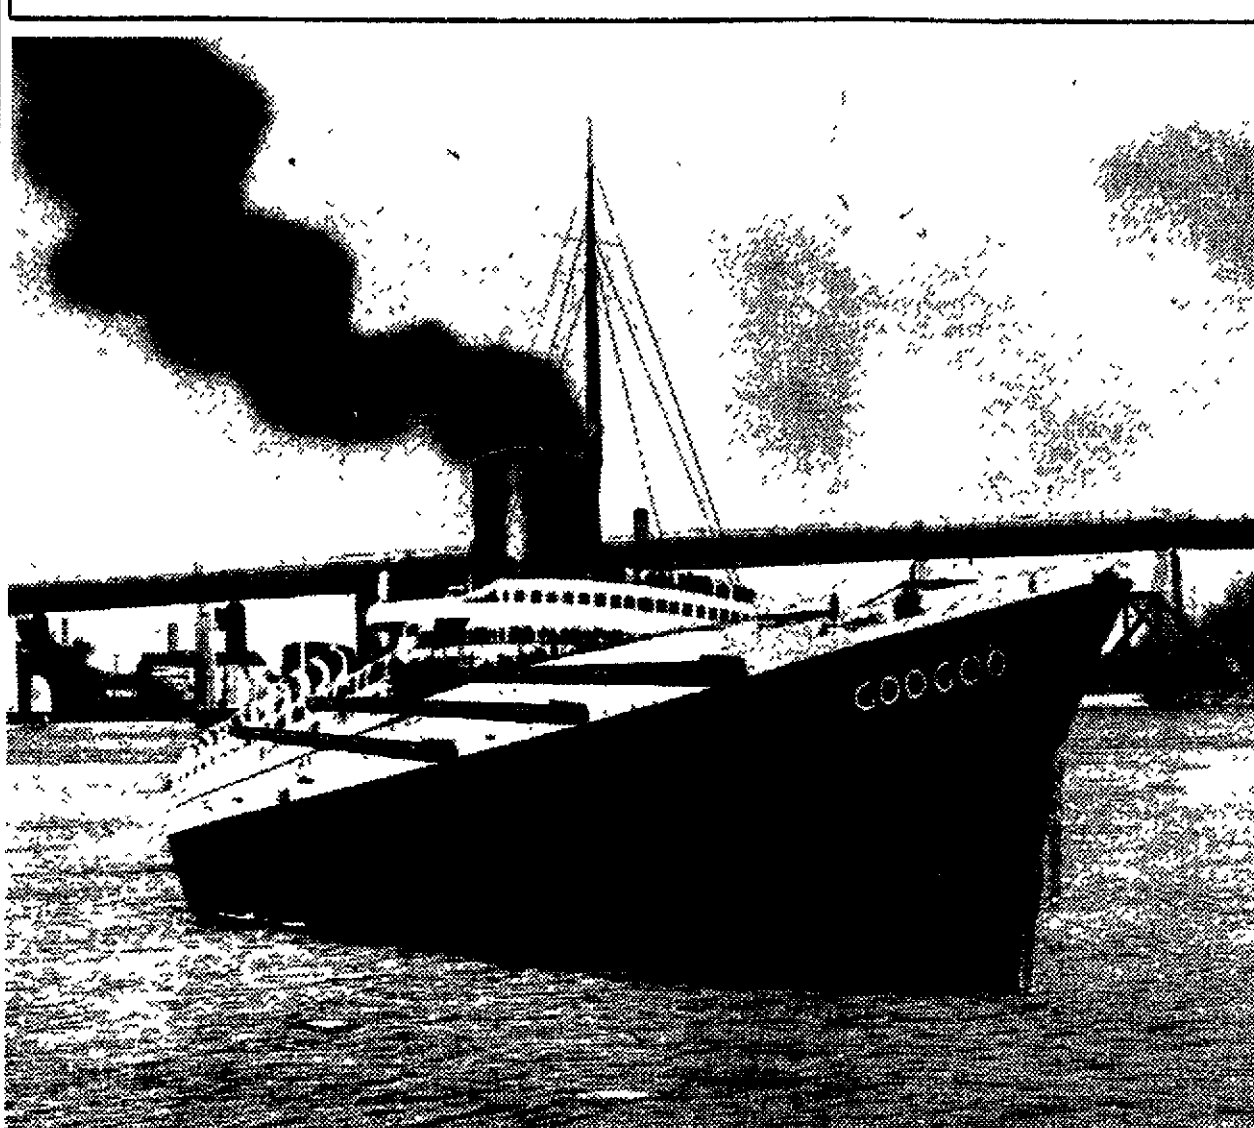

Weyauwega—Issue of biggest importance in the election for the city of Weyauwega Tuesday will be the proposal to adopt the city school plan in Weyauwega, to fix the number of members on the board of education and terms of office, to determine the manner and time of election and calling a special election.

Aside from the school issue, the only opposition locally is confined to the First ward, where four candidates have filed for the two aldermanic vacancies, and where there is also opposition for the office of supervisor. The term of Henry W. Crane has expired for alderman, and Leo Richter will move out of the first ward. Crane will be a candidate to succeed himself, while the other three candidates are Herb Dobbert, Walter Koehler and Sam Saltzman.

Opposing Henry W. Glocke, present supervisor from the First ward, will be Edward H. Carpenter. In the second ward there are no candidates other than the incumbents, Fred Zeichert, alderman, and Fritz W. Bauer, supervisor. Likewise, in the Third ward, Harry Rachy, alderman, and Ed. F. Munsch, supervisor, are unopposed.

Mayor E. M. Knowles has no opposition, while five other officers are holdovers. These include Perry M. Baxter, city clerk; Mrs. Emma Haure, treasurer; Herman Gerlach, assessor; George Stevens, alderman in the Second ward, and Walter Kamp, alderman in the Third ward.

POST - CRESCENT SCORES SENSATIONAL CAMERA SCOOP

Motorists spinning over the Memorial Drive bridge swallowed their morning cigarettes when they looked down on the Fox river expecting to see a few empty beer cases floating on the water and instead saw a full-sized warship lying at anchor.

A janitor unlocking a College avenue business place this morning rubbed a shaking hand over his eyes and looked again at Admiral Byrd's snow cruiser moored slowly down the city's main stem.

An alderman, walking through Pierce park, stopped stock still, his jaw dropping, muttered, "My sakes alive, I must have missed a swimming pool in the middle of the park." The warship on the Fox smelled faintly of spices, causing passersby to believe it came from afar. Its deck swarmed with sailors playing sheephead or washing out their sarongs in the crystal clear waters of the Fox and then moodily plucking off stalks of algae.

True to its tradition of "All The News That's Not Hard to Get," the Post-Crescent dispatched a reporter and photographer only two hours after receiving the first of a series of calls from curious people.

Captain Norbert (Dread) Naught was found sitting on the stern (nau-

No Candidate for Justice of Peace At Kimberly Polls

Kimberly—The office of justice of the peace in Tuesday's election will be wide open for "write in" candidates as the incumbent, Floyd Lambert, did not take out nomination papers for the office. Two years ago the same situation prevailed for the office, when Ray Hamann, high school coach was elected by the "write-in" method. He turned the office back to Mr. Lambert.

The only opposition will be for trustees where Henry Williams and Gordon Welch will oppose incumbents, Leonard Goffard, Henry Melcher and Martin Van Heeswyk. Lloyd Lang will seek reelection for the village presidency and county supervisor.

Other officers seeking reelection are Paul Lockschmidt, clerk; Harry Van Himerberg, treasurer; Martin Vandehey, assessor; and Martin Keyzers, constable. Voters will also decide in a special referendum whether the president, supervisor, clerk, treasurer, assessor and constable should be elected for a two year term. The present term is for one year. The polls will be open from 7 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock in the evening.

Confessions will be heard at the Holy Name church Thursday afternoon and evening for those wishing to receive holy communion on the first Friday of the month. From 7 to 8 o'clock in the evening holy hour will be held. Next Sunday will be communion day for the Christian Mother society.

Per capita consumption of fish in the U. S. amounts to about 13 pounds per year, markedly less than in most European countries.

tical for rear end) of the ship thoughtfully spearing bullheads with a saber he won in a barnacle scraping tournament.

When questioned, Captain Naught said, "Dam, I'm up the river." He said that the last thing he remembered clearly was that the ship "Goo-Goo," was cruising placidly somewhere off Indo-China "when something started chasing us." When asked about the ship's future course, he retorted, "throw another log on the fire."

Daniel Drift, driver of the snow cruiser, said that he was on his way to visit a cousin in Nebraska. He reported that he had taken the large vehicle with him instead of his car when he heard reports of the late winter.

Both he and Captain (Dread) Naught admitted that they were glad it was April 1. "Saves a lot of explaining," they explained.

Restrictive Legislation May be Adopted by Congress, Lawrence Says

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington — The effort sponsored by Senator Hatch and Representative Dempsey of New Mexico to purify American politics by restrictive legislation has achieved a momentum which even mischievous opponents will not thwart at this session of congress.

But these sabotaging amendments, designed to make the measure so unpalatable to the Republicans that they would desert certain allies on the Democratic side who have been pushing the bill, are likely to be accepted rather than to endanger passage of the meritorious additions to the original Hatch law. These latter clauses would prevent state employees working on projects supported by federal funds from being regimented for political purposes.

There are two sabotaging amendments, however, to which in moments of thoughtlessness some administration leaders have given their support in the senate and to some extent in the house. One provision in the senate bill would limit individual contributions to $5,000. Another provision adopted by the sub-committee in the house which is dealing with the bill would limit any political committee to $3,000, 000 total expenditure in any one campaign.

The language of these two changes is so loosely phrased by those who hoped to kill the bill that they have inadvertently introduced new elements in campaigning which are apt to prove a boomerang.

Other Committee Limitations. Thus a $3,000,000 limitation for the Republican National committee and for the Democratic National committee respectively will merely mean that all kinds of decentralized committees will be formed, each of which will be able to collect $3,000,000. The so-called "Labor Non-Partisan league" can collect $3,000,000 and so can a Dewey-for-President club or a Vandenberg-for-President or a Taft-for-President club as the case may be. Also there can be formed a dozen American liberty leagues with broad general purposes, but using their funds for political campaigning. As long as contributions are properly reported to the clerk of the house of representatives these various national political committees can arise by the scores.

Then there are the state committees. Such a political committee need have no name on it referring to any national candidate at all, but simply the name of the Republican or Democratic nominee for the governorship. Contributions can be gathered all over the country and sent to these different state committees. It would take a board of psychologists, if not G-men, to discover when a paid precinct worker, who urges the voter to cast his ballot for the gubernatorial candidate and a "straight ticket," is really being compensated for national or state purposes.

These are practical considerations which everybody familiar with politics knows about. Thus the supposed virtue of the plan to limit expenditures to $3,000,000 for each political committee is transformed into a particularly vicious sort of political campaigning. For the more political committees in existence, the more racketeering there develops. Decentralization of a national campaign into 20 or 30 collection agencies will only mean that more money will be wasted and more will be wasted and possibly, as the funds are trebled, there will be even more corruption than before.

Better Plan. A much better plan would be to take the highest campaign expenditure in the past by any political party and set that as a top limit for each party with the proviso that no funds can be expended except through the regularly designated national committees of any party entitled to a place on the ballot.

Even this cannot touch the question of state political committees. Nor can $5,000 contributions be confined to national committees for there is a lawful right to contribute to state campaigns and the federal constitution cannot be stretched to cover the conduct of elections to state offices where no federal funds are involved in the picture.

Much can be done to purify politics by specific legislative prohibitions, but even more can be accomplished by requiring full public disclosures on the part of all those who contribute as individuals and all organizations which contribute lump sums. Many dues-paying organizations today do not tell their members that the fund collected are to be used for political purposes. It ought to be required on collection slips.

All Phrase. Perhaps that might mean too much detailed work and the same result could be reached by adding a

Clapper Says U. S. Is Acquiring Vested Interest in World War

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—Opinion here is confused and pessimistic about the allied outlook and it is not likely that Sumner Welles brought back much to change that feeling.

We are throwing in a good deal of help. Not only does our revised neutrality act operate in favor of Great Britain and France but we are practically turning over our aviation industry to them.

The administration policy is to give Great Britain and France priority in purchase of any of our military planes that are in production, withholding only a few of the latest secret devices such as the bomb sight, which apparently is superior to that used by any other power. After Secretary of War Woodring and Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson outlined this policy to the house military affairs committee this week, members indicated they would offer no opposition. The next morning the senate military affairs committee voted down a proposal to investigate the sale of planes to the allies. Individual members, including Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, pronounce this policy another step toward involvement in Europe. But the evident disposition in congress is to support the policy.

This means that the production capacity of the American aviation industry is practically placed at the disposal of the allies. Experimental work will be continued for our own military purposes, but the allied purchasing missions now have the first call on the planes that are in regular production. In the judgment of some here, this is one of the major developments in American policy, and is the equivalent of what some describe as a major military victory for the allies, since airplane production capacity is a prime factor in military superiority.

Some here are of the opinion that the production capacity of the American aviation industry is practically placed at the disposal of the allies. For the purposes of such a law, affiliated organizations or local chapters or units would be considered as a part of a single national organization limited to $5,000, but no such limit would have to be applied to any organization established avowedly and primarily for political purposes. It's the undercover collection of money by non-political organizations which produces the big slush funds in the major parties and in this respect the Democrats nowadays are no better than the Republicans used to be. Full disclosure would bring its own correctives.

LOANS

YOU CAN BORROW $100 IF YOU CAN PAY BACK $6.43 A MONTH

Loans made without endorsers — No credit questions asked of friends or relatives — Quick, private service.

Do you want to get a loan quickly and simply? At Household Finance you can borrow $20 to $300 without endorsers or guarantors, if you can make regular monthly payments. From the table below you may choose the payment plan which fits your own purse. You may repay a small amount each month. Or you may make larger payments in order to pay up sooner.

Choose your own payment plan

Suppose that you need a $100 loan. You find this amount in the first column of the table. Then read across picking out the monthly payment which you wish to make. You will find, for instance, that monthly payments of $9.77 each will repay a $100 loan in full in twelve months. Or, if you wish smaller payments, as little as $6.43 a month for twenty months will also repay a $100 loan.

When you borrow at Household Finance, you pay charges only for the actual time you have the money. The sooner you repay, the less your loan costs. Four monthly installments of $26.60 each, or a total of only $106.40, for instance, will repay a $100 loan in full. (Payments shown in the table include all charges. You pay nothing more.)

One rate to everyone — Household charges only one rate — the same to everyone, whether new customer or former borrower.

All you do to borrow

All you do to get a Household Finance loan is to acquaint us with your problem. We require no salary or wage assignment, no stocks or bonds. (Loans are made on furniture, car or note.) No questions regarding your credit are asked of friends or relatives — and you don't have to ask friends or fellow-workers to sign the loan papers with you. You get the money you need in a simple, private transaction.

Fair treatment

Household shows every consideration to the borrower faced with sickness or unemployment while paying on a loan. Last year Household foreclosed on only one chattel mortgage for each 10,000 loans — an action taken then only as protection against fraud.

Find the loan you need in the first column of the table and read across. See how you can repay, your loan with a small part of your pay check. Then phone or visit us. You will be under no obligation to borrow.

New London Will Elect 11 Officers From Large Field

26 Candidates Seeking City Posts; Polls Open At 9 O'clock

New London—From 9 o'clock Tuesday morning until 5:30 in the afternoon, New London voters will cast their ballots to pick city officers for eight contested posts in the most contested municipal election in recent years.

Despite the large field of 26 candidates for the total of 11 offices, pre-election activity has been limited largely to circulation of cards and letters.

New London's two largest labor unions, Edison Local 1642 and Plymouth Local 2890, held open forums for candidates' speeches after their respective meetings at Labor hall Friday evening and Saturday afternoon but few availed themselves of the opportunity. Mayor candidates M. E. McDonnell and Francis A. Werner spoke at the hall Saturday afternoon while aldermanic candidates campaigned informally among the crowd at Friday night's gathering.

Also to be decided at the election is the repeal of the teacher tenure law and the choice of presidential primary delegates. Voters will choose four delegates at large and two from the seventh district in both the Republican and Democratic ranks.

Local Candidates

The local candidates to be voted on at the various ward precincts located in the three public schools are as follows:

Mayor—Francis A. Werner, M. H. McDonnell, Lynn Springmire.

City Attorney—Giles H. Putnam, incumbent, Ormond W. Capener.

City Assessor—E. C. Oestreich, incumbent, Page Dexter, Emil Gorges.

First ward alderman—A. A. Trambauer, Ervin Huetley, D. B. Egan.

Second ward—Matt Clark, incumbent, Gust O. Krueger, Jay Joubert.

Third ward—Edward Krueger, John Yost, Walter Fredericks.

Fourth ward—Otto Stern, incumbent, Henry Fisher.

Fifth ward—William Behm, incumbent, August Behn, Louis Kurszevski.

School commissioners—Dr. C. E. Hamberger and Louis Schmalenberg, unopposed for reelection.

Irvin Ziebell is unopposed for constable from the Fourth ward.

Because the regular meeting of the common council falls on election day, the meeting will be postponed until Wednesday evening when the ballots will be canvassed and the newly elected officers will be seated.

Deanery 1-Act Play Tournament Will be Held in Parish Hall

New London—A deanery 1-act play contest will be held at the parish hall of the Most Precious Blood church here on Sunday, April 28, according to plans made by deanery officers of the Catholic Youth Organization at a meeting here yesterday. The cast for New London's play, "An Evening at the Blakes," was selected last week and rehearsals will begin April 8 under the direction of Miss Betty Moise. In the cast will be Robert Maize, Rosemary McDaniel, Bernard Freuburger, Kathleen Polaski, Eugene Pilon, Charles Clark, Doris Wochinski, Eva Mae Schmidt.

A deanery dance for the 10 Catholic Youth organizations in the surrounding area will be held at the parish hall here Wednesday evening. A Shawano orchestra has been engaged and dancing will be held from 9 until 1 o'clock.

28 Head of Cattle And 4 Horses Die In Burning Barn

Loss on Cox Farm in Town of Holland Estimated at $8,500

Forest Junction—A basement barn, 38 by 86 feet, and an adjoining two-story granary were destroyed by fire of unknown origin on the Thomas Cox farm in the town of Holland, about four miles north of Forest Junction, late Saturday evening.

The loss, estimated at around $8,500, includes 18 head of milk cows, 10 heifers, four draft horses, more than 25 tons of hay, over 600 bushels of assorted grains, a strawstack, dairy equipment, harnesses and miscellaneous other items.

With Miss Helen B. Cox, manager of the farm, absent on a business visit in Chicago, Joe Harlow and Arnold Zuelke, employees had completed chores in the stables at 7 o'clock Saturday evening and had retired at 9 o'clock. Two hours later they awoke to find the barn in fire. Flames already blocked the customary entrance to the building.

Through another opening, two of six horses in the doomed building were freed, as were three head of cattle, one of them so badly burned that it is not expected to survive.

Wrightstown, Greenleaf and Forest Junction fire departments were summoned to the place. A rising northwest wind wafted blazing embers directly to the new residence at the farm but its slate roof proved immune to the bombardment of sparks. Controls of a water supply system at the farm were in the burning building, making it impossible to procure water in fighting the blaze.

Approximately one-half of the loss is covered by insurance.

A earlier residence at the farm had been destroyed by fire in March, 1933.

CICERO NEWS

Andrew Lueck and John Kromchuk were re-elected trustees for three years. Other members are William Gator, chairman; John Gator, secretary; Francis A. Werner, treasurer; William M. Knappstein, P. J. Dornbach. The group will hold election of officers at its next meeting.

A REASON

Strange things appeared in the headlines today.

Congress to cut appropriations and reduce taxes; Hitler promises amnesty to all Jews; Chamberlain goes walking without his umbrella; Yankees concede pennant to Athletics; Banks cancel all accrued mortgages.

Such things seemed unbelievable. And just then we read that Vice President Garner was taking John L. Lewis hunting with him, a woman admitted women's hats were dizzy and Postmaster General Jim Farley had come out for Dewey for president.

No wonder we got a traffic ticket while reading all of this. And that added the final staggering blow when the traffic cop tore the ticket up.

What is this, the millenium? Perhaps we would never have known if a friend hadn't come along and said, "Your shoe's untied. . . Ha! Ha. April fool!"

So it is. The date for loaded cigars and phony candy. The heyday for jokesters and the Waterloo for the credulous and the forgetful. Therefore, beware. This being "All Fool's Day" there are very few who are safe.

FEDERAL BUSINESS

After an absence from his office for several days recently, Governor Heil returned to Madison and explained that he had been holding conferences with a high federal official. Purpose of the negotiations, the governor explained, was to get federal government orders for Wisconsin businessmen.

In that intention the governor exhibited a laudable interest in the welfare of the businessmen among his constituents. But at the same time he left himself wide open for a legitimate and serious criticism.

Governor Heil a few months ago—on December 1—was one of the honor guests of the Wisconsin Manufacturers association in Milwaukee. He may remember one of the most courageous and provocative speeches made at that convention, the remarks of Paul N. Reynolds, executive director of the Wisconsin Taxpayers' Alliance.

"Too many American businessmen today look upon the government as another customer, and they are afraid to say or do anything which might offend their biggest customer," Mr. Reynolds told Wisconsin's biggest industrialists and businessmen in his talk.

The modern relation existing between business and government was described by Mr. Reynolds as "grab a nickel and lose a dollar." What he meant is that the money paid by the federal government to businessmen was extracted from those businessmen in the first place. It is not sound, productive business; it is, or ought to be, in fact, an unwelcome business, for it is a reflection and a dramatization of a huge and mounting total of government expenditures and debt.

It is not pleasant to see the governor of a great state, himself a leading businessman, going to federal officials for a share of the government's business patronage.

It is a hint that some businessmen are dependents of the federal government, just as great numbers of other citizens are dependents.

But more important, if the business community or any important part of it becomes a dependent upon the federal government's patronage, and if huge numbers of other citizens not engaged in business learn to look to Washington for their sustenance, where will be the will and the courage to insist upon a halt in unproductive spending?

How can Mr. Heil as a Republican, for example, criticize the Democratic administration at Washington for its high budgets if he spends a weekend now and then trying to persuade that administration to spend among Wisconsin businessmen? It is illogical and disturbing.

AMERICAN INDUSTRY WILL FIGHT WAR

It is significant of trends and suspicions in this country that so many great business concerns and leading industrialists are helping instruct the country in the fact that there is no profit to anyone in war except the worms.

United States Steel Corporation is the latest to write its employees and stockholders—a quarter million of each—of its bitter hostility to armed conflict with the implication that neither workers nor stockholders can gain anything lasting or worthwhile if we permit this peaceful nation of ours to bow down to Mars.

Edward R. Stettinius, chairman of Steel, says "war orders represent only a fleeting prosperity and war business is certain to result in a disrupted shifting of our economy." Continuing he laid down as "the first requisite of a lasting prosperity" not only peace but "the prospects of enduring peace."

Of course men intimately acquainted with this Administration's inability to look anyone in the eye do not trust its protestations of peace. They do not believe that Mr. Roosevelt wishes war but they have no confidence in his judgment or that he has sufficient foresight to have any idea where his showy policies may lead us.

As the war continues, and increases in ferocity, the difficulty of remaining aloof will grow proportionately. Then the critical need of men of integrity in high places instead of bubble-blowers will be our only protection against catastrophe.

CANCER MONTH

Fear and ignorance have gone hand in hand to make slaves of human beings down through the ages. Lacking knowledge, it is man's nature to set his enemies up as ogres from which he tries to protect himself by any number of superstitious practices.

The story of civilization is the story of the spread of knowledge which conquers fear and debunks ogres. Yet there remain today a few superstitions which are hangovers from the days when man knew no better.

The Ogre Cancer is such a case. It is an outstanding example because it is only in recent years that much has been learned about this disease. The battle to educate people about cancer and destroy their fear of it is today at its height. That battle centers around national Cancer Month, the month of April. Its generals are the Women's Field Army, who have taken the bull by the horns and resolved that they will do everything in their power to spread information about the causes, nature and best methods of curing cancer.

Any physician will say that cancer's greatest ally is ignorance. He will unequivocally state that if a cancer case is reported to him in its early stages he will have an excellent chance of effecting a cure. He will further assert that cancer in most cases can be prevented by the ordinary precautions of body care.

An undercover war against cancer is being waged by scientists to discover the cause of cancer, its nature and some absolute cure, if such there is. Within the past year it has been discovered that lowering the temperature of the human body for a period of several days to a week has some definite effect on cancer growths. This is one of the most widely-known examples of the progress which is being made.

All of this scientific data is still woefully incomplete. But it is safe to presume that with the money, time and effort being expended in such research, great results can be expected.

In the meantime the task to which the Women's Field Army has dedicated itself is one of education, one of telling the world that cancer is not a disease which cannot be cured and never will be beaten. This army is distributing factual information on symptoms, treatments, causes which should be of consuming interest to everyone able to read.

These women ask only the public's attention. They only wish to shout out that Cancer is not an Ogre.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO TRAVEL

Another reason to expect that this will be an exceptional year for traveling the United States can be found in the way eastern railroads have accepted the Interstate Commerce Commission's decree that passenger fares be reduced from 2 1/2 to 2 cents per mile.

Contrary to the assumptions of many observers, the railroads did not attempt to offset the reduction by boosting round-trip fares from 1.7 cents to the maximum 2 cents per mile. Instead, they cut the round-trip rates to 1 1/2 cents a mile, for the longer trips.

That is a highly commendable cooperative attitude. It also is an encouragement to travel.

Although the majority of Americans do most of their traveling by automobile, many prefer the greater ease of the rails, especially for long trips. The new rates should prove attractive to them.

The new rates also will serve to test another theory as to the best way to get the railroads back onto sound financial legs, a most important job considering the size of the railroad industry, the amount of dividends its stocks pay, the taxes it pays and the thousands of persons it employs.

According to the Interstate Commerce Commission the experimental period of 2 1/2-cent fares failed to prove as profitable as an earlier trial of the 2-cent rate. Some railroads disagreed with this conclusion. The current test should prove which contention is correct.

The public has already benefited materially from changes in passenger rates. Memory recalls that not many years ago the basic fare was 3.6 cents per mile. And that was in the day when the seats were none too soft and smoke and soot came into the coaches in generous quantities. Since then the service, the comfort, the speed and the safety of rail travel have been improved immeasurably, while rates were being reduced.

It will be due reward if the railroads also profit by the new rates.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

Washington — The inner circle advocates of a $1,500,000,000 WPA budget have won their fight in the White House.

They have convinced Roosevelt that his original $1,000,000,000 estimate was too low, and he has authorized WPA Administrator Harrington to tell the house appropriations committee that the president now favors an additional half billion — which would bring the WPA budget up to this year's level.

Harrington appears before the committee today. In addition to the confidential Roosevelt message, he will give the committee an economic report showing a marked decline in business since Jan. 1 and a heavy increase in unemployment. According to Harrington's figures, the demand for relief is greater now than at any time since the winter of 1938.

Two influences won over Roosevelt. One was Mayor LaGuardia of New York, who painted a very doleful economic picture and told him the cities could not increase their relief loads, that the federal government must handle the problem. The other was a confidential treasury report on the recent income tax payments.

The figures showed around $100,000,000 more than treasury estimates, for a total of $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 over 1939 receipts. Strongly economy minded, Secretary Morgenthau was keeping this information secret, for fear that if it leaked out the spenders would goggle up the excess. But the inner circle got wind of the cache and used it as a trump card to win over Roosevelt on the WPA issue.

UNINFORMED
You know just as much as Mrs. Roosevelt does about the president's plans regarding a third term. She has no idea what he will do, has not discussed the matter with him and does not intend to.

That's a decision," she says, "that a man must make for himself."
Note—in a chat with an old friend during his illness last week, Roosevelt gave a possible clue to his trend of thought in this reflective observation: "Teddy tried for a third term but couldn't make it."

SILENT JACK
During the 1939 battle over the original Hatch bill, barring federal employees from political activity, Vice President Garner issued his first statement on a legislative issue. Said he to newspapermen: "I can quote me as saying that this bill will pass."

But during the bitter two-weeks battle over the latest Hatch bill, extending the politics ban to state machines, Garner said not one word, spent little time in the chair during the debate, while a number of his closest cronies were in the van in the effort to defeat the measure.

Note—Since the inclusion of the senate amendment limiting political contributions to $5,000, the Hatch bill is now referred to in congressional classrooms as the "You-Can-Sin-Up-To-Five-Grand" bill.

MANICURED TRUCK DRIVER
Seldom has the capital's young social set been so a-twitter as over the news that Beatrice Phillips, popular daughter of the United States ambassador to Italy, was leaving for France to do her bit in the war.

Attractive and chestnut-haired, she sails April 8 to drive an ambulance for the American Friends of France, organized by Miss Anne Wall street tycoon. The other afternoon at a cocktail party, Miss Phillips was the center of an admiring throng who bombarded her with questions.

"Heavens, Bee," exclaimed a debutante chum, "here you suddenly announce you are leaving for France on this perfectly exciting adventure, and no one has had a chance to talk to you about it. Where in the world have you been keeping yourself all winter?"

"I've been taking a first aid course at Red Cross headquarters during the day," she said, "and working nights in a garage."

"In a garage! Whatever were you doing there?"

"Oh," said Miss Phillips, fingering her exquisite coiffure with a smartly manicured hand, "just learning to change tires. That's part of the job, you know."

COMEBACK
The Workers Alliance, badly hit after last year's curtailed WPA bill, has quietly been staging a comeback in recent months. It now has a dues-paying membership of close to 300,000 in 2,000 localities in 45 states.

An important factor in the revival was a ruling, issued by WPA Administrator Harrington on direct orders of the president, that the clause in the WPA bill barring relief to anyone advocating "overthrow of the government by force or violence" did not apply to Alliance members. Both Roosevelt and Harrington gave the Alliance a clean bill of health.

WAR NECKTIES
When the war department goes shopping for neckties goes the whole hog. It went to Philadelphia the other day and bought $36,225 worth of neckties for enlisted men.

This was part of a general purchase of supplies, which included $13,587 for mosquito bars, $32,513 for bath towels, $985 for "moving of building," Patterson Field, Ohio, and $12,250 for embroidered shoulder sleeve insignia for the CCC.

NOTE—This last contract went to Herbert Lehmann, Inc. of New York City. He is not the governor, who spells his name Lehman.

MERRY-GO-ROUND
Few know that Civil Aeronautics Chairman Robert Hinkley, to promote interest in aviation among students, offered three prizes at the last annual meeting of the National Intercollegiate Flying club, $300, $150 and $50, for the best essays on the subject of "The Cultural Value of Flying." Judges of the contest are a group of aviation experts. . . . Trust busting Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold was a book for the history of the Sherman anti-trust law for its fiftieth anniversary on July 2.

The new Hatch bill as passed by the senate is a lot tougher than is generally realized. Section 14, an amendment inserted by Senator M. M. Neely of West Virginia, is a death blow to state political machines built up on "Two Per Cent Clubs." The provision bars all forced contributions. . . . Campaign literature distributed by Wisconsin New Dealers for a slate of delegates publicly pledged to a third term links Roosevelt to the late "Old Bob" LaFollette and assails Jim Farley as a scheming foe of the president. One delegate on the ticket is Francis E. McGovern, two-time LaFollette governor of Wisconsin. (Copyright, 1940)

THE PIONEERS

There are a few trees in the crowded wood That reach with calm persistence to the sun. Taller than all their dreaming sisterhood, The starlight finds them first, when day is done.

They have stood longer, and their burgeoning Reaches perfection. All the other trees Look up to them. In their eternal Spring They seem to hold celestial harmonies.

Like women growing old in godly deeds, They are the pioneers. We hold them high, For they fulfill our own soul's deepest needs, And lift our fainting spirits to the sky.

A Bystander In Washington

BY JACK STINNETT

Washington — Mark Twain said nobody ever did anything about the weather — but the Allies have.

They've done their best, to knock the weather forecast into an unintelligible African mumbo-jumbo: to make clear, bright days pop up when storms were in the offing; to melt away fogs unexpected 1 y; and to get General MacD to fight on their side without even warning the Nazis whose colors he is carrying.

So far, the only effect of all this on Old Doc Weatherman in the United States has been to give him a few headaches and pains in the neck. With all his assistants from far Pacific to mid-Atlantic, he's still able to take the pulse of the weather in the U. S. A. and tell you that the situation will be tomorrow: Hot or cold, rain or shine, or fair and warmer.

Somewhat, the world's weather has gotten to be almost as important a factor in the war in Europe as how to finance the fighting, or which way the neutrals are turning, or who's going to get what axis next.

If you don't think so, saunter over to the old red brick chateau, stables and carriage houses that are the home of America's No. 1 weather bureau and nose around a bit.

Coast Guard Patrol
Up in New York, Boston, Portland, Me., fellows are haunting the docks, sidling up to mates and captains and saying a little more subtly than this: "Hey, Pal, how about some weather reports?"

Meaning, of course, when they get out to sea, will they please send back some information.

The skipper of one of the big Scandinavian liners was so approached the other day and his answer was: "Well, maybe, until about Cape Race, but nothing doing. Think I want to get held for violating neutrality by giving information (indirectly) to an enemy?" Far out to sea, about a third and two-thirds of the distance between Bermuda and Horta, two coast guard boats are constantly taking weather readings, on deck and in the skies (with balloons) and four times a day broadcasting them to the world.

From certain Canadian points come coded messages giving information the United States has agreed not to use for any purpose other than working out its own forecasts.

The Alaskan weather stations have multiplied in importance. Efforts are being made to keep the Siberian and other Soviet stations broadcasting regularly. Japan's trickily coded messages are used like those of Canada, secretly and only for completing the U. S. weather map.

Weatherman Is Accurate
I could go on endlessly: About the coast guard ice patrol, which radios weather back from beyond Newfoundland, from which no weather ever comes any more; about the broadcasts from Greenland and Iceland; from Horta and Lisbon; from the ships which may be on the axis but still has ships at sea.

As to how much all this hullabaloo over weather has helped the Allies, experts here can only guess. In the closing months of the World War, its importance was recognized generally, but in those days, the Allies had the U. S. and its weather information on their side. It's conceded now that the Germans know what we know, they are able to box out a weather map that may be fairly accurate.

But it's conceded also that weather fights on the Allied side. It moves, generally speaking, from west to east. If the British could move in on the Nazis the way their weather does, the war would be over tomorrow.

DOESN'T LIKE "MOOCHING"
Editor Post-Crescent — I read the Swimming Tax Payers article in the Post-Crescent and I want to say that I agree with him 100 per cent. Appleton has talked about a pool long enough. I think the city should build it and build it this year.

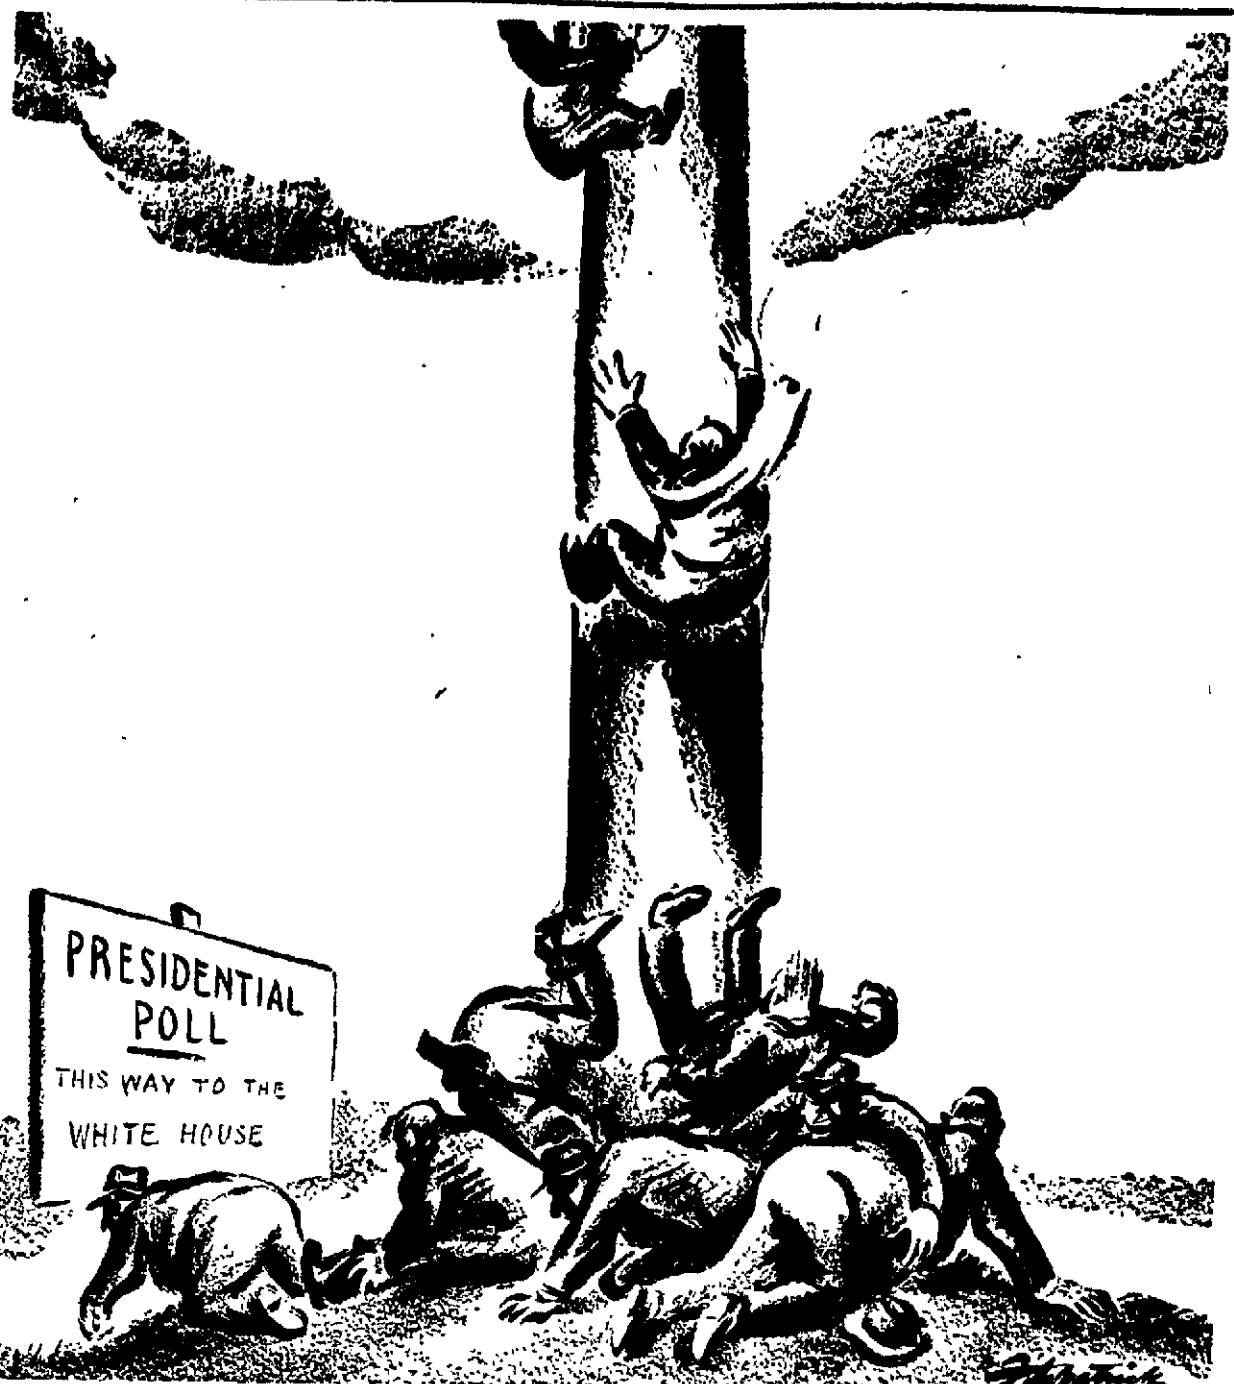

In my opinion, we've been mooching on other communities long enough. I know that whenever my son wants to go swimming, he either has to go jump in the river or mooch off of another community, such as Menasha Beach, or the New London Pool, or hitch hike to the stone quarry.

Of course this year maybe he can mooch off of Neenah. They built a new pool over there and if they don't charge Appleton swimmers too much admission charge maybe he and his friends can get in there.

My daughter likes to swim too, but she'll have to confine her swimming to Sundays when I take the family to New London or some place.

If I get into a conversation with anyone in other communities and

EARLY RETURNS

Under the Capitol Dome

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison — Don't overlook Congressman Merlin Hull of Black River Falls when considering the list of Progressives available to oppose Governor Heil this year.

Hull is one of the best known and most experienced men in the Progressive party. He comes from a rural district, and has a farm background, two of the factors which Progressives feel will be important this year when the party's labor front will have to be minimized for the sake of expediency.

What is more important is that some of the Progressive managers have advanced Hull's name in their private sessions repeatedly over a period of many months.

UNSETTLED
It cannot yet be said, however, that there is anything definite to be said on the identity of the Progressive standard-bearer. Progressive county chairmen are still coming to Madison to find the answers to the increasing number of questions put forward by their home town satellites.

It is quite plain that John Thiel of Mayville, former tax commissioner, is eager to run, but some of the smartest of his Progressive mates feel that the task of putting over the relatively unknown Dodge county man will be too big for the six months remaining before the election, and are talking about the advisability of getting a lake shore candidate of German descent, recalling that the only governors elected by the Republicans in the last four decades or so were Kohler, Philipp, Zimmerman and Heil, all of them hailing from the Lake Michigan area, and all of them with the advantage of roots in the German-American vote.

PROOF
Proof of the eagerness with which the rest of the state is awaiting the outcome of the Vandenberg, Dewey and Garner-Roosevelt contests in Wisconsin Tuesday can be found in the arrival last weekend of some of the big league political writers from the east.

Some of the best known reporters on big eastern papers are in Wisconsin to cover the presidential primaries and the delegate elections, and regard the vote here as of national significance.

JULIUS LOBBIES
Some of Governor Heil's lobbying efforts with prominent American industrial leaders have been widely publicized, at his own suggestion. Other ironies which the governor has in the fire, however, have not yet been made public.

It is reliably reported, for example, that Heil has been negotiating with high officers of the United States corporation with a view to persuading the firm to expand its Lake Superior operations to help the near-bankrupt city of Superior. Moreover, there is talk that the chief executive is trying to coax some ship-building business for

COINCIDENCE
Governor Heil publicly admitted last week at a hearing that he wanted to transfer the Superior highway office to Rice Lake, in the center of the northwestern district, and that the transfer to Ladysmith was decided upon at the last minute.

To judge from the manner in which local spokesmen battled to retain the state branch offices they are considerable community assets.

am asked "why doesn't Appleton have a pool, I can always tell them that we in Appleton keep our tax rate down as its cheaper to mooch than to provide our own civic amusements.

Personal Health Talks

SHOULD DIABETIC DRIVE?

In this column recently we told of the case of the automobile driver who drove his car almost at walking pace between two lines of traffic, colliding with three of the vehicles on the wrong side of the road. The drivers of the three vehicles of course squawked loudly about it, but our hero backed off a bit and went grudgingly on. He still had designs on a standing truck; having collided with the truck the "drunk or crazy" driver skidded to a standstill at last.

A policeman (not Irish, strange enough) approached the driver in that diffident way you may have noticed, and politely inquired whether the driver was playing tag or just nudging his neighbors to make them see the joke. But the driver seemed too dazed to understand what the policeman was saying. It developed that the erratic driver was a diabetic. The police surgeon certified that the driver had been under the influence of insulin and unfit to drive a car. A physician recognized as an authority on diabetes testified that the patient would generally have amnesia of any excessive reaction to insulin, but that the driver's condition at the time of the accident might have been due to the fact that improvement was taking place more quickly than he and his doctor realized, so that a dose of insulin which had hitherto been only just enough was now an overdose; in other words, the patient's own insulin-secreting function had become partly restored.

Recital of this case brought a number of letters from readers. They are almost equally divided, some thanking me for warning the public about this traffic hazard; others deploring my unkindness to victims of diabetes who have to drive cars.

One correspondent describes the wrecking of his car and serious injury of members of his family by collision with a young driver who ran into the parked car in broad daylight without apparent reason, admitted negligence in the presence of police officers and other bystanders, explaining that he had failed to eat lunch after a dose of insulin . . . then slipping away and dodging about the country for a year since the accident trying to evade responsibility. The victim rightly asks why a person in such condition is given a driver's license, which permits him to jeopardize the safety of the public.

Another correspondent wonders how many excellently fit or capable diabetics will be fired from their jobs as a result of my exaggeration of the trifling risk involved.

Altho many diabetics suffer such hardship as a consequence of my teaching, I still maintain that a person who has diabetes is unfit to drive a railway engine, a surface or subway engine or an automobile, and it is a gross betrayal of the welfare of the public to license such unfit drivers in any circumstance.

QUESTION AND ANSWERS
A for Sensitivity to Glare
The writer has for years been exposed pretty constantly to actinic light. Altho I have worn cheaters as much as possible, still I suffer from irritation and watering of the eyes on exposure to even diffuse skylight and I can't stand direct sunlight at all without dark glasses (W. T.)

Answer—It can do no harm, rather. Presumably, therefore, townfolk of Ladysmith were grateful for the location within their boundaries. And as a result there is some speculation on the possible connection with that decision of Senator Joseph Mc Dermott of Ladysmith, a Progressive who rendered aid to the Republicans on several strategic occasions in the last legislative session, including the passage of the labor bill.

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO
Monday, March 21, 1930

The mighty 1930 census mill which would tally and tabulate the population of these United States was mobilized and motorized, ready to go bright and early Wednesday morning. Nationally illuminating facts on unemployment, illiteracy, industries, agriculture and racial proportions were to be determined.

The Lawrence college Glee club of 45 voices was on a tour of Wisconsin and Minnesota cities. Mrs. J. B. MacHarg, 225 N. Morrison street, was to be hostess to St. Martha guild of All Saints Episcopal church Tuesday afternoon at her home.

25 YEARS AGO
Monday, April 5, 1915

Although a drizzling rain rained its best to dampen Appleton's Easter, the churches were all crowded to capacity and the special services were highly successful. Many braved the bad weather in their new spring apparel.

Arnold Gritzmacher became sole owner of the barber shop formerly owned by himself and H. J. Heistrom on Oneida street. Gritzmacher having bought out his partner the previous week.

Jack Johnson was knocked out in the twenty-sixth round that afternoon by Jess Willard, the Kansas cowboy in a fight for the world's championship at Havana. Johnson lost the championship, the Negro weakening after the first few rounds, but got $30,000 for the match.

Average length of sentences for federal prisoners increased from 14.7 months in 1937 to 16.5 months in 1938, or 12.2 per cent.

Menasha Polling Places to be Open 12 Hours Tuesday

Expect Heavy Vote in Race for Mayor, Assessorship Referendum

Menasha—Polling places in Menasha will be open for 12 hours Tuesday, from 7:30 in the morning to 7:30 at night, for Menasha voters to register their choices for city office as well as delegates to the national party conventions.

The race for mayor as well as the assessorship is expected to bring out a heavy vote. Mayor W. H. Jensen, who is completing his first term, and Frank O. Heckrodt, former mayor, are the contestants for the chief executive position. Heckrodt ran second to Jensen two years ago in a 3-way race for mayor.

Menasha voters will vote on a special referendum to determine whether the city will change the assessment system to one full-time man appointed by the council or whether the old system of two part-time elected assessors shall be continued. Voters also will elect two assessors who will have only the honor if the referendum is approved. However, if the referendum is voted down the two assessors will take their posts April 16.

Candidates for assessors are R. M. Heckner, incumbent, H. C. Steidl, and Harold Hanson. Joseph Stommel has been forced to retire from his position as assessor because of illness.

The only other city-wide contest is for justice of the peace. Arthur J. Alce, incumbent, is seeking his fourth term and is opposed by Attorney Arnold J. Cane.

Voters of the entire city also will receive three other ballots. One is for a judicial officer for the village of Winneconne and Winnebago county although there are no candidates. Voters through the state will vote on the proposed repeal of the teacher tenure law.

Convention Vote
Republicans and Democrats also will vote for representatives to their respective national party conventions. Each party will have several choices with two Roosevelt places, one Fairley state, and an unopposed state seeking a Democratic position. Republicans will be able to choose between Vandenberg, Dewey, and unopposed delegates. Each person can vote for four delegates at large as well as two delegates from the Sixth district.

Contests for alderman in each of the wards also are expected to increase the vote. Only three officials are without opposition. They are the supervisors, V. M. Landgraf in the First ward, E. G. Sonnenberg in the Third, and A. J. Seithamer in the Fifth.

The First ward aldermanic race is between Raymond J. Keefe and Milan Skrypczak. Reuben Tuschetscher, who is completing his first term as alderman, is not seeking reelection.

A new alderman also is assured in the Second ward where M. F. Crowley, former city attorney, is not seeking reelection. Crowley was appointed to the post last year when Earl Sauter resigned. Contesting for the post are Edward E. Howley and Patrick Keapock.

3 In Third Ward
Three contestants are seeking the Third ward post. William Karrow, who is completing his first term, is seeking reelection. Silas L. Spengler, former supervisor, alderman, and city attorney, is one of his opponents and Alfred Baencko, a new comer in city politics, is the other. In the Fourth ward, where candidates usually are numerous, only two men are seeking the council post. They are John R. Scanlon, incumbent and Edward Stinski, who was a candidate for the post last year.

Three candidates likewise are seeking the Fifth ward post. George J. Stip, a former alderman, has entered the lists to oppose the incumbent, Walter R. O'Brien, who is completing his first term. The third candidate is J. Cyril Hand.

Polling places will be the same as for previous elections. First ward voters will cast their ballots at the city hall. In the Second ward votes will be cast at Butte des Morts gymnasium and in the Third ward the voting places will be Nicolet school. St. John's school hall will be used as a voting place in the Fourth ward and in the Fifth ward votes will be cast at Jefferson school.

Menasha—Voters of the town of Menasha will select their town officials at the annual spring election Tuesday. Ballots will be cast at S. A. Cook armory and the polls will be open from 9 o'clock in the morning to 8 o'clock Tuesday night.

Five candidates have been nominated for the two supervisor posts. They are Harvey Grundman, Howard Ehlers, William Grundy, and Harry Lopus.

For town clerk voters will choose between George Witz, incumbent, and John Schmidt. Joe Eisch and Walter Klinkke are the contestants for assessor. For justice of the peace L. O. Cooke and Emil Radick have been nominated and R. C. Gillingham and Simon Wile are contesting for town constable.

In addition to the election of town officials, the voters will ballot on the teacher tenure referendum, the judicial officer for the village of Winneconne and Winnebago county, and for delegates to the national party conventions.

Oshkosh-Neenah Busses Must Quit This Week

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
Madison—Operations of the Yellow Motor Bus company of Stevens Point between Oshkosh and Neenah and Winchester in Winnebago county must cease this week, public service commission authorities said today.

Cleveland, Ohio—Judging from a blast in this morning's mail, Randolph Scott's visit in Charlotte, North Carolina, will not endear him to the press.

My informant, a two-time reporter on a leading Tarheel Daily. Sent by their managing editor to interview the visiting fireman, they failed to so much as gain admittance to The Exalted Presence. Mr. Scott, after keeping them waiting for a half hour, finally sent word that he would be much too busy for the entire week of his stay to have a single moment for the press. The reporters, to put it mildly, seem a bit irked. And, honestly, can you blame them?

By what possible process of reasoning do so many of our morning glories of Filmville convince themselves that they are too important to repay public interest with common courtesy? How can they forget the simple fact that they are each, like it or not, ambassadors of an industry which exists only by public favor—an industry that could stand a lot more of it, too, as box-office records testify?

You see in Hollywood an amazing paradox. On the one hand, a host of rising stars who would give their eyes-teeth for favorable notice from the press—who pay a good portion of their income to publicity agents, and lie awake nights trying to concoct new schemes to make a favorable impression on the public. On the other you see the graduates of the same school, finally arrived "in lights," deliberately tearing down their fan followings by just such gestures as this faux pas of Randy Scott's.

IDOL CHATTER: Errol Flynn's biography—and bank book—estimate that old wheeze about rolling stones gathering no moss. Peas-in-a-pod: Helen Vinson and Virginia Vail. Despite the fact that she calls him "Russie Bussie," the Russell Simpson's have been happily married for (thirty years. In-a-line description of Vera Vague: Mary Boland imitating Gracie Allen's imitation of Tizzie Lish. Judy Garland would be a natural for the Jive-entle lead. Suicidal approach: "And now, Mr. Burns, I'm sure our readers would like to hear about your love life." It's the star who insists on acting out his next role for every listener who gets my nomination as Public Ennui No. 1.

Arthur Murray reports a conversation overheard between two Hollywood glamour gals. Said the first: "I hear you have a new boy friend." "I did have," retorted her pal, "but he turned out to be too egotistical. He was always talking about his pictures—instead of mine!" (Copyright, 1940, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Reserve Officers at Meeting at Wausau

Wausau—Major Waldo Hanson, Wisconsin Veterans' Home and Colonel A. E. Woody attended the eighth annual sector meeting of the Reserve Officers' association at Wausau Saturday afternoon and evening at the Elks club. The annual election of officers took place and the program consisted of short talks by visiting officers. Colonel H. Clay M. Supplee, Milwaukee, get the simple fact that they are each, like it or not, ambassadors of an industry which exists only by public favor—an industry that could stand a lot more of it, too, as box-office records testify?

No official military banquet had been planned but Major Hanson met with the 42nd Infantry Reserves for dinner and Colonel Woody with the 52nd Field Artillery Reserves, of which he is a member.

Lead of Ace Often Is Best Against Slam

By Ely Culbertson

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: I once took my wife rather severely to task for failing to cash immediately her three aces and thereby defeat a five diamond contract. Her opportunity for a somewhat similar criticism (involving an opening lead on my part) arrived recently in the following hand which may appeal to the readers of your interesting column.

North dealer

The bidding:
North East South West
1 spade Pass 2 diamonds Double
Pass Pass Pass Pass

South's seven diamond bid was in my opinion atrocious but I am reporting to you the actual bid I sat West and must admit that my double also may be subject to censure but I knew South's tendencies to stretch bids occasionally.

"I must admit that I was extremely uncomfortable, after having quickly doubled, in realizing that I had to lead of course, the burning question was, should I lead the spade ace (which I reasoned South might ruff) and thereby set up the dummy's spade suit for any losers South might have. I finally, after considerable deliberation, and considering my six-sunder in spades and that North had bid spades, opened my singleton trump as probably the least damaging lead for our defense. Of course the contract then was a laydown.

"Perhaps you will consider this hand of sufficient interest to comment upon. A. J. M. New York"

The question whether or not to lead an ace against a slam is truly a baffling one when the contract in question is a small slam, but only under the most outlandish conditions does the same problem arise when the opponents are seeking to take all the tricks.

To begin with, I must emphatically state that I do not approve West's double. There is little sense and less percentage in doubling a slam which may or may not be defeated, especially when the doubler does not know what to open. However, in this case, the double having been made, I see no excuse for West's failure to open the spade ace. On the peculiar bidding that took place why should West have assumed that North's one spade bid represented a long suit? On a pure "probability" basis there was more chance of a five card suit or possibly even a four carder. And normal partnership practice is to bid more when there is at least a slight fit with partner's opening bid, hence presumably South was more likely to have made his remarkable jump to seven diamonds with one or two of his partner's suits than void in that suit. At any rate, West should have reasoned that if South had a remote idea of what he was doing, he (West) would have to try for his spade trick in a hurry or abandon all chance for it, since it was virtually a cinch that North's hand would provide some other suit upon which South could discard his probable maximum of two spades.

To repeat, against the laying down of aces, against small slams, sometimes yes, sometimes no.

My Neighbor Says—

The soil in which seeds are sown need not be rich. Seeds will sprout in sand as well as in fertile loam, but when transplanted into pots they will need good earth, for the roots will begin to feed on the nourishment to be found in the soil.

Rhubarb is over 90 per cent water. Consequently, little water is needed in cooking, merely enough to cover the bottom of the dish. The "don't overcook" warning or reminder is as appropriate for rhubarb as for most fruits and vegetables. Slow, low heat and not too long help keep both color and flavor.

Pour left-over pie filling into buttered baking dishes. Bake until firm. Serve chilled as dessert for children's lunches.

Brown pineapple rings and sprinkle with chopped green peppers. Serve them hot, as a steak or chop garnish.

If you have a garage or garden shed try covering them this season with Heavenly Blue Morning Glories, Rose Mott and Cardinal Climbers are two other kinds that grow well.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

All the luxury and soft shadings of lovely chinchilla fur is called to mind when one looks at this exquisite coiffure for pepper-and-salt hair, designed by Lura de Ger.

"Every woman near forty should show her ear-tips," are the words of Helen Cookman, a prominent New York designer of chic clothes for the middle-aged woman. She believes that a youthful, dignified effect is thus acquired which helps to carry off nicely styled coiffures.

A recent hair stylist agrees with her, and further states that the upward coiffure, now so much in vogue, is particularly becoming to the woman of that age group. Many women forget the salt-and-pepper stage of changing hair. They let it set them down. They shouldn't. They cease to take interest in the care of their hair or its styling. Which is a grave mistake. Nature fades our hair to harmonize with our fading skin. You have seen a fading face beneath a mass of dyed hair and it has given you a jolt. If the experiences of life have taken a forfeit in the pigment of our skin and hair, let's accept it gracefully. You have the choice of giving your skin great care and keeping it youthfully lovely in texture, and having your hair expertly tinted so it will not look dyed, or of letting your hair remain its natural shade and caring for it as diligently as you do your skin. You are not old, just because your hair has begun to fade. But you will look old unless you keep both your complexion and hair beautifully groomed, and your eyes young!

Care For It Intelligently
Graying hair is quite likely to be dry. Therefore hot oil shampoos are in order, and scalp massage with finger tips. Daily brushings with a good clean brush, works marvels and if you will seek a good hairdresser and put your head in his or

Good Taste Today

CHURCH WEDDING

Whether a father's refusal to be present at the wedding—although not opposing his wife's sanction of their daughter's marriage—requires this bride to forego the entire wedding picture except the mere reading of the marriage service, is the unusual question presented in the following letter:

"The bride has always dreamed of what her wedding would be like some day. She had a beautiful white herself, bridemaids in pale floating colors; organ music; laid solemnity to the occasion; lots of beautiful flowers and a reception at which every one would be happy. It is especially sad to think that she, of all people, shall not be able to have any of these things.

"You see, she has chosen the wrong man—in her father's opinion. He won't have anything to do with the wedding, although he hasn't forbidden her mother to go ahead with the arrangements. Somehow, however, none of us feel that it will be good taste to have a real wedding when the bride's own father will be absent, and that it might be best for the young people just to go to the clergyman's house and be married in the presence of a few witnesses.

"Perhaps I ought to tell you that there is nothing wrong with the bridegroom. He made an unfortunate mistake in his youth—foolish as the truer word—for which he has been forgiven long ago by every one in this town except the bride's father, who refuses to forgive or to forget."

The question of real importance, it seems to me, is whether the bride may, because of what she believes unfairness on her father's part, take a stand which may not lead to happiness. In short, whether she herself is in a somewhat defending frame of mind, or whether she is feeling all the happiness and pride in the thought of her marriage that a bride should feel. If this last is true, it would certainly give a wrong impression of her feelings should she behave as though she were abashed.

Surely she may have a church wedding. A simple one is always in very best taste. She can have her ethereal white dress and veil. (In fact, the word "ethereal" suggested a particularly simple dress and a veil of tulle.) If she has a brother to take her father's place, she may have four or even six bridesmaids. If she has no brother, she may with perfect propriety walk up the aisle alone, preceded by her maid of honor, and followed by two bridesmaids. The more attentive she has, the more noticeable the absence of her father or brother will be. There would be organ music of course, and flowers on the altar. If she walks alone, her mother gives her away, by assenting from where she stands in the front pew.

Since it is unlikely that her father will consent to appear at a reception, it is perhaps questionable whether her mother will feel it proper to give one. If there is to be none, it would be suitable that the bride and groom wait at the back of the church after the recessional to receive the good wishes of the guests as they leave.

MAN MEETS MAN

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it not obligatory for a man to take off his hat, or at least to tip it, when he is introduced to another man? I had always thought so, but some of my friends are disagreeing.

Answer: Some of your friends are right; men merely shake hands. Emily Post's booklet, "The Etiquette of Weddings," will answer all the questions about the ceremony and reception that you have been asking yourself. Send for it, enclosing ten cents. THE HOME GARDENER

by EDWIN H. PERKINS

The worst features of both winter and spring are now combined in the weather. In most sections of the country outdoor gardening is not only unpleasant but practically impossible. To take a chance with valuable seedlings in the open ground is foolhardy. A variation of the cold frame used by florists may be tried.

A small home-made box arrangement fitted with a sheet of glass for a cover will allow for sowing tender annuals outdoors in warmer sections and, where the need for heat is indicated, it can be supplied through the use of fresh stable manure.

The box can be 8 inches high in front, 12 inches high in back and 17 inches long with a width of about one foot. Glass or a substitute tacked to a frame forms the top. This can be made to slide in grooves or tied down with cord. On warm days the glass can be slid down to ventilate the seedlings but must be replaced on cool nights. Sink the box into the ground, pile soil around it to keep cold winds away and we have a cold frame.

Convert it into a hotbed by simple. Evacuate a space, as large as the outside dimensions of the box, to a depth of 12 or more inches. Place firmly compacted fresh horse manure in the hole to a depth of 6 inches, atop this add 6 inches of sand or leaf mold, then set the box so that its lower 4 inches are in the excavation and again pile soil around it.

or what they really are. We work and hope strong in the faith that in all of them lies much that is good.

Parents Must Deal Warily With Child's Self-Esteem

By DOROTHY DIX

One of the most delicate and difficult problems that confront parents is how to save their children from having inferiority complexes and at the same time prevent them from becoming blatant little egotists who make all with whom they come in contact think that Herod was a much misjudged man and that there is great need for his services in the modern world.

The mother of one of these top hot-air bags writes me of her perplexities and asks how she can deflate it to normal size without entirely collapsing it. She says:

"My husband and I are modest people who do not think unduly well of ourselves. We cannot account for the fact that we have a son who, at the tender age of 9, is so filled with self-conceit that he lives in continual apprehension of his exploding. He is one of those pestiferous children who are described as being fresh. He is one of the fools who walk in where angels fear to tread. He breaks into the conversations of his elders and monopolizes it by telling about what a wonderful baseball player he is.

"He sneers openly at his Grandfather's views as being old-fashioned and only condescends to him when he wants a tip out of him. He wouldn't hesitate to tell Lindbergh how to fly a plane, or to advise Mr. Ford about making cars. In a word, he is a self-complacent little braggart and bore.

"We can't bear to think of him growing up into being the stuffed-shirt sort of a man, filled with his own importance, whom everybody laughs at and flees from. Yet neither do we want him to be one of the humble chaps who goes out into the garden and eats worms for breakfast. So what we want to know is how to get our little pink balloon out of the stratosphere to somewhere near the earth.

This is a hard question to answer because a certain amount of self-confidence is necessary to the happiness and success of every one, and in trying to curb their children's vanity parents only too often paralyze their energies and kill their ambitions and foredoom them to failure. For it is certain that we can only do as much as we think we can do, and if we have no belief in ourselves we can accomplish nothing.

Undoubtedly, parents put out the fire on many an altar by continually dousing their children's egotism with cold water. Many a man who might have been a figure in the world has lived and died in obscurity because Father and Mother belittled his talents and his efforts when he was a child and told him over and over again how absurd it was for him to think that he could ever be or do the things to which he aspired.

Many a girl has grown up into being an awkward, self-conscious woman instead of a beauty because around the outside. As soon as the violent heat from the manure has escaped it is safe for use. Seeds sown in pots plunged in the sand grow wonderfully well. Replacing the soil allows for seed sowing directly in the ground.

Other plans will suggest themselves to the practical-minded. A square or round gallon size glass jar used to cover a pot of plunged seedlings equals the "French forcing hand-glass" and a gallon size tin can with top and bottom removed is useful when covered with a sheet of glass.

He is happy when the three of us are together. I still love him in spite of all that has happened and at times I feel sorry for him. I care so much for him that I could be his life. Have been a good wife and mother and he has nothing to complain of about me.

Sometimes I wonder if I am not a coward because I don't take my

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

When women become sexual degenerates, even under the respectable guise of marriage, they often try to bring other women down to their own level. "Misery loves company" runs the old adage, and this is a psychological truism typical of the situation confronting Phoebe in today's problem.

CASE Q-125: Phoebe G., aged 27, is the wife of an office executive. "We have been very happily married, and cherish the better things of life," she began. "We belong to church and enjoy cultural interests. But, Dr. Crane, to what extent does one have to go to stay sociable? I don't enjoy myself among the wives of the other officials of my husband's company.

"When I visited a group recently, the hostess exclaimed, 'You're just in time to climb in bed with my husband.'"

"And for the rest of the evening they told vulgar stories which I wouldn't think of repeating. They maniac. Misery loves company, so when a woman degenerates morally, she seems to enjoy pulling others down to her level.

What Are You Advertising?
A vulgar woman may not fully realize the following facts, but she is advertising to the world that she is probably promiscuous and the casual plaything of several men.

I have never met a vulgar woman who wasn't either a commercial or social prostitute. By the latter term I mean a woman who doesn't sell her body for dollars and cents, but who sells herself for the temporary ego inflation of hearing a man's saccharine flattery.

The latter women are often afraid that they haven't a normal woman's physical charm and attractiveness. They suffer from a sexual inferiority complex, therefore, which requires occasional affairs as a means of convincing such a woman that she can actually attract a man.

It is typical of inferiority complexers that they try to compensate such extremes as to be very obvious and even nauseating to the average person.

Sexual weaklings are prone to patronize the Follies and burlesque shows. They delight in pornographic pictures, lewd stories and sexy magazines.

The bald-headed row at the Follies is composed of men who fear their sexual vigor is waning fast. With a jaded appetite, they resort to what amounts to sauces and relishes of a psychological sort.

They are trying to pep up a feeble sex appetite. This attitude is typical of sexual weaklings. They excessively try to stimulate their imaginations with sexual tales and pictures. In order to inflame themselves.

Sexuality among human beings is not more than 50 per cent physiological. Our minds are responsible for a large part of our sexual hunger.

Men and women with waning physiological desires, may feverishly attempt to stimulate their feeble appetites by vulgar stories, alcoholic sexual brawls and promiscuity. I advised Phoebe to be courteous to her husband's associates, but never degrade herself to their level.

Blood Runs Cold

By Ann Domarest

Yesterday: Several of Joan's valuable books are missing. Christine tells the Sergeant about the lost set of duplicate keys. Later, she shakes Ishl, who is trailing her, and meets Dirck.

Chapter 31
Breaking The News
Dirck shook his head slowly. "That's a funny thing," he said. "Very funny."

"It may amuse you, but I don't like it. Every time I go out of the apartment someone comes in. I feel just like Mrs. Evans. One more night in that house will be the death of me."

"I hope not, darling," he said, very calmly. "I surely hope not. I'd miss you."

I ignored him and lighted a cigarette. "You're not really afraid, are you?" He looked down at me quickly.

"Oh, no, Mr. Koff," I said, avoiding his eye. "Being mixed up in murders is an everyday occurrence for me. There's nothing I like better than having a murder next door, another one overhead, people whisking around the fire escape at all times of night, notes left in my room warning me of my imminent death, and the police badgering me."

"You know Chris," he said lazily, children and leave, but I haven't any way to support them and he is a good father to them. Besides, as long as this girl stays in the house with me no one knows of their relationship. What do you think of all this?"

AN UNHAPPY WIFE.

Answer:
Well, I'll say that Patient Griselda had nothing on you. I have never heard of such a story of meekness and forbearance and the love that passes all understanding as you tell it. It is one that every woman will read with tears of pity for you.

There is no use in asking why you love this poor, weak, miserable man to whom you are married and who has broken every decency by betraying both you and the young girl who was under his own roof, and further expecting you two, mistress and wife, to live together in harmony. Probably you do not know yourself why you are the slave of an emotion that is too strong for you to resist and that makes you willing to eat the crumbs of kindness he throws you. Only God who made the mystery of woman's heart can understand a wife like you.

Not can any one tell you what to do under the circumstances except to warn you that you must send the girl away. You owe her, at least, that much protection after the harm she has come to in your house. You cannot keep your queen triangle a secret, and when it is known there will be plenty of scandal about the three of you living together. For polygamous husbands are rare enough to make juicy news.

"I'm a china painter," I said, "I don't even have to go out and scrub floors to support you."

Blinding Snow

"Not on Wednesday afternoons," I said, backing away.

He grinned. "It's your fate. Funny as it is, I'm getting attached to it."

"Will you keep your mind on the road?" I said. "We'll wake up at Montauk Point if you aren't more watchful."

In a minute or two he said, "We'll have to get out here. I think we'll find it better on foot."

I got out reluctantly. The snow had been accumulating all winter, because in some places the drifts covered an old wooden fence that bordered the path. We tramped on, not making much progress. It was pretty difficult to walk because the snow was blinding and it was dark for early afternoon. Dirck broke a path ahead, and after ten minutes of stumbling he saw a light.

"This must be the house," he called back to me. "And, Chris, I have to tell you now that we might not be particularly welcome."

"Why?" I shouted, and the cold air hurt my teeth.

The wind howling around the trees may have drowned my question. Anyway, he didn't answer, so all I could do was follow him meekly, wondering why the MacDonalds would want to see us. Of course there was no reason for a visit, but certainly they had nothing to fear from us.

I was astonished at the size of the house. It was hard to see much because I had to keep my eyes half closed to keep out the snow, but even the glimpse I had was startling. It was a tremendously large and pretentious place. Except for a light in a front room the place seemed to be deserted. The front walk and steps hadn't been cleared of snow and I had a hard time landing safely at the front door. Dirck was breathless with laughter when I slipped and clung to him for safety. Even the brass knocker on the door was covered with ice and Dirck had great difficulty prying it loose. I imagined they hadn't many callers in the winter.

He knocked sharply, two or three times and we waited what seemed a long time, eyeing each other dubiously. Finally the door was opened on a crack and a voice asked what we wanted.

I couldn't tell whether it was a man or a woman and I couldn't see anyone.

When Dirck said he was a friend of Richard MacDonald's the door opened wider and an old colored man let us in.

The only light as we walked down the wide hall came from a candle in a tall silver candlestick that the old man held high over his head.

I followed him nervously, wondering what on earth had possessed me to come with Dirck, without a protest, to a house where we might not be welcome. Then I saw a woman moving towards us. It was Joan's mother. She

Johnson Scores Republican Campaign, New Deal Defense

Editor's Note: During Westbrook Pegler's vacation, the daily column by Hugh S. Johnson will be substituted in the Post-Crescent.

BY HUGH S. JOHNSON
Washington, D. C.—This column is no pre-convention booster of the candidacy of Mr. Dewey. His bid rests largely on his reputation as a brilliant criminal prosecutor. To that, all hail! He did a swell job in New York cleaning up gangsterism, the judiciary and the office of public prosecutor. Neither do I carry any torch for Mr. Roosevelt's third term candidacy. Yet, I believe that the smash against the backwash of filth and corruption of the prohibition era was sparked by the president himself. Certainly the ending of the era was his alone.

Johnson

He laid the job out in his 1932 campaign. He promised to clear the mess. Whether under Attorney Generals Cummings, Murphy or Jackson, there has been no let-up. I hate some of the methods. Of the result there can be no question—kidnaping is almost out, gangsterism is on the run, judicial speculation and low ethics at the bar have become too dangerous to practice—much.

I give the New Deal credit for this, notwithstanding that I could name a few places that have been soft-pedaled. In general, the atmosphere has been greatly cleared. I doubt whether, without this presidential trail-blazing and fog-clearing, even Mr. Dewey could have done what he did.

However that may be, there is splendid credit enough for all and there is no occasion to balance merits. But, as a lawyer, I don't believe that the mental attitude of A-1 public prosecutors is a proper one for presidents.

Knowing the sincere talents of their legal opposition, they would not be realistic to respect too much the juridical theory that they are there to protect the constitutional or common law rights of the accused—even while they try to hand him. The gangster's mouthpieces can be relied upon to do more than enough of that. The D.A.'s are there to get convictions. If they don't get them, they go. It is perhaps, in modern conditions, a necessary evil but it is hardly an objective attitude toward any kind of opposition. Every opponent is an enemy and most enemies are crooks. However far we may have departed from the original idea, any American president is still supposed to be president of all the people. It is no job for a prosecutor.

All this leads up to Mr. Dewey's St. Louis and Chicago speeches. They are clearly arguments for the prosecution and they are nothing more. Most of the indictment is a true bill but I must say again: No Republican candidate is going to get by first base on purely negative criticism—especially of the super-heated prosecutor type—without convictive suggestions. If Mr. Dewey has offered anything important of the latter nature, I have yet to read it.

Attack on New Deal Is on broken Promises
The only things that give me a greater pain, are New Deal defenders who hear and cannot contest that obviously true bill of continuous and cynical disregard by this administration for elementary truth in statement. Full United of solemn engagements and respect for promises—and answer them by saying that Aubrey Williams, John Henderson, Secretaries Perkins and others have stolen any money or taken any bribes—as Secretary Fall did. They will know that it is not against such as these that Mr. Dewey laid his charges. Neither have I known of a single case of graft among New Dealers. But if these defenders do not recognize that there is a deeper betrayal of public trust by lack of honesty than stealing public money, I recommend that they read Harry Scherman's "The Prince and the Little Boy." That deeper betrayal is undermining public honor and faith.

The whole structure of domestic and international peace and civilization, commerce and family relations depends on unquestioned confidence in promises and public assertions of supposed truth and on these alone. Never in history has there been a greater governmental contempt for them. That contempt is the doctrine of Machiavelli, Hitler and Stalin. It is reflected also.

house and the sharp whip of sleet on the windows.

And then from the open doorway came a sound. It seemed at first like a moan, yet the tones were blurred. Then we heard a voice, and that voice called for Richard.

I suppose the whole thing didn't last more than a minute, from the time Mrs. MacDonald inquired about Richard, until we heard the voice, but sitting rigidly in the chair I felt as though I'd been in that strange dark house for hours. But Richard's mother seemed not to have noticed.

"Your telephone, Mrs. MacDonald," Dirck said in a strange voice, "isn't it working?"

She shook her head. "The storm last night," she murmured. Straightening in her chair, she turned her eyes on Dirck. "Why?" she asked sharply, bending forward.

Dirck drew his chair up so that he was quite close to her. "Richard died early this morning."

"The only emotion she showed was the way her slender fingers closed over the curved arms of the chair."

"Richard?" Just that. With her eyes on Dirck she sat perfectly still. After a moment her lips moved and I sensed rather than heard the word, "How?"

And just as I thought of that, she spoke again. "How is Richard?" she asked.

A Strange Woman
I must have stared at her with my mouth wide open. I knew then that I would never make a good detective or poker player. Dirck, too, was silent. He couldn't seem to collect his wits.

How long we sat there in the bleak, ill-lit room staring at her, stupidly bereft of speech, I don't know. I felt shivery and cold. The only sound was the wind whistling in the pine trees around the Dirck hesitated. "They don't know," he said in a low voice. "He was found on the cement walk in the ward this morning."

He hesitated. "It was, perhaps, suicide, after all."

She was a strange woman. She must have been going through torture. Both of her children were dead, her husband was very ill, yet she didn't lose control for an instant. From Richard I'd gotten the idea that she was a somewhat spoiled woman, dependent on people and accustomed to being taken care of, yet she said nothing, and when she spoke again it was to ask us if we'd prefer sherry or whiskey and soda.

"You must be cold after that long drive," she said in a low voice.

We protested when she rang for the man, but she had him bring sherry and biscuits anyway. While we drank it, Dirck told her in a gentle voice what had happened. She listened attentively, but made no comment except to ask how her brother took it. And she didn't ask why we'd come, a natural question since it was the most unlikely place in the world that anyone would happen in on. And Dirck made no explanation until finally he asked whether it would be possible to see Richard's father. Mrs. MacDonald hesitated, then rang for the old man again and spoke to him briefly. He disappeared and the three of us sat without talking.

Washington's Home Town Will Relive Its Colonial Life

Historic Fredericksburg, Va., home town of the Washingtons, will relive its colonial life from April 22 through 27 when the Garden club of Virginia sponsors a tour of more than 100 homes and gardens for the benefit of the garden at Kenmore, Fredericksburg, home of the patriot, Colonel Fielding Lewis and his wife, Betty, only sister of George Washington.

This is the land which the Daughters of the American Revolution helped to restore by contributions and the sale of Mary Washington's gingerbread mix. The D. A. R. is therefore much interested in the tour, and since it comes right after the national convention of the organization at Washington, D. C., a number of delegates, among them Appleton's Mrs. F. G. Wheeler, Wisconsin state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will probably go to Fredericksburg for the festival.

The old market square at Fredericksburg will come to life again, with costumed market women in charge of eighteenth century booths of flowers, fruit and Virginia crafts. In the stone windows the Daughters of the American Revolution will display a collection of famous papers and documents.

Paul Knapstein of New London to Wed Miss Marie Garrow

The approaching marriage of Miss Marie Garrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Garrow of Lebanon, to Paul Knapstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Knapstein, New London, was announced with the publishing of the first banns Sunday. The marriage will take place April 10 at St. Patrick's Catholic church at Lebanon. Both young people graduated from New London High school last spring.

ARTHUR Rubinstein, whom the critics of America have variously called "breath-taking," "electrifying" and "monumental," has found the demand for his pianism in this country tripled in two consecutive seasons. Commitments all over the globe had taken Mr. Rubinstein away from the United States up to two years ago when, after an absence of 10 years, he returned for a limited engagement of seven weeks during which he played 15 recitals. Last season American audiences recalled him for 45 concerts in 13 weeks.

He will appear at Memorial chapel Monday night, April 15, concluding the Community Artist Series. To Rubinstein, all of life is more or less an adventure. His vibrant, dusty pianism is his way of expressing his passion for the very process of living. His philosophy is that there is no "ersatz" for life; and since he believes that in any experience there is something to make one better, he asks and gives no quarter to life. To quote him: "I prefer to die younger than to spend my years merely sniffing around life." For that reason he refuses to give way to pessimism in the face of world crises. For that reason he believes that through music he can appeal to the sensitivity and sympathy in man. Rubinstein can sense a receptive audience almost as he walks toward his piano upon the concert platform.

Once at his concert in San Francisco he felt that kinship with a veiled woman sitting in a box. After the recital, she appeared in his dressing room, still veiled, and asked simply: "You were playing for me, weren't you?"

"Yes," Rubinstein answered. "Thank you," said the woman, leaving the room. He never saw her again.

TO THE VOTERS LOOK THIS UP!

At the Library you can look up the Wisconsin Statute 62-49 (6) that states the method our Altermen used in 1930 to set the salary at $500, then in 1940 they put it at $400, thereby admitting that the other was too high. Then look up Statute 10-43, (6) as to the Referendum as to a salary at $250. It says such proposed ordinance or resolution shall take effect immediately after election if the majority of the qualified electors voting there on shall vote in favor thereof.

What could be more easy to understand, if that had been put before the Court what would they have said.

I see some candidates have sent out hand bills saying they would abide by the wishes of the voters, also as to the $250 salary, and would be pleased to have them call at any time as to city affairs. Our Altermen would be surprised, also the voters, if the Court's decision was that a Referendum election vote carried by a majority of the voters can take effect at once after election.

Veteran Tells Knights About Father Duffy

DESCRIBING the late Father Francis Duffy, noted chaplain of the New York Irish regiment in the World war, as "an example of Americanism," Walter Melchior, Appleton attorney who served with Father Duffy in the war, told of his wide influence and tremendous following among the soldiers, his courage and his zeal in carrying out his priestly duties on the battle fields, in a talk before members of Branch No. 6, Catholic Knights of Wisconsin, Sunday morning in St. Joseph's hall.

"The best description of Father Duffy comes from his own lips," Mr. Melchior said and he quoted the famous chaplain, who, speaking of enlisted men not of his faith, said, "As for myself, I like them all. I am a very Irish, very Catholic and very American person if anybody challenges my convictions. But normally let alone, I am just plain human. My appreciation of patriotism or courage or any other attractive human trait is not limited in any degree by racial or religious or sectional prejudice. That was the spirit of our army; it always has been the spirit of our republic."

The speaker told of the close friendship which existed between Father Duffy and Joyce Kilmer the poet.

Mr. Melchior described the battle of Champagne in 1918 which he called the most bitter fight of the year, and told how Father Duffy, in spite of regulations was as usual in the thick of things, bringing consolation to the dying and helping to sustain the courage of the fighters.

Speaking of the soldier-priest, Mr. Melchior said "An ordinary day in his life appeared to constitute an entire life time for an ordinary individual. It is little wonder that one of the basest corners in the world should have standing there the statue of a

'King Cole' to End Children's Theater Season

FOR the last time this season, Appleton youngsters will troop into Lawrence Memorial chapel to witness a play by the Clare Tree Major Children's theater, "Old King Cole." The play will begin at 3:30.

The name of Old King Cole is familiar to every child through the nursery rhyme, but the story of the play is not a nursery story but one intended for children of the upper grades. It concerns a jolly king who loved music in his palace and always had a group of excellent musicians ready to play for him, day and night. Three of these fiddlers wore gay clothes especially designed for them, and one of the chancellors, to heighten the decorative effect, had a law passed that they should always be of three different stated heights. If one grew past his required height he was put into the general group and the search began for a new fiddler of the right size for the favored three.

The king liked this arrangement, for he loved to disguise himself and go about alone to see how other people lived. It was on one of these excursions that, disguised as a beggar, he came upon a boy and his sister who were being mistreated by a landlord and about to be sold as slaves. All the boy had was an old violin which he played beautifully, and when the king heard him he promised to help them.

Upon examining the violin, the king learned that it was one of his own, the boy's father having been a court fiddler. Then a note tucked inside the lining of the case revealed that the boy's father had been murdered by the landlord. A confession was obtained from the landlord the children were freed and the boy became the new third fiddler.

The play contains several violin selections and dance numbers.

What's New at the Library

Being in Helsinki when the first bombs came over, and witnessing with his own eyes many incidents of the struggle of Finland against the invasion of Russia, H. B. Ellis, author of the new book, "Finland Fights" is qualified to tell about conditions in Finland. As special Christian Science Monitor correspondent, he was on the scene during the early days of the war, and as a neutral observer he accompanied the commission to investigate the alleged Finnish acts of aggression which Russia used as a pretext for invasion. He also discusses the underlying factors leading up to the war.

"The Art of Being a Person" by George Ross Wells, professor of psychology at Hartford seminary since 1920, is a discussion of the reality of personality and the necessity for understanding others, singly and in groups, as well as oneself.

The historical background of our coinage and currency system through its development from the money used by the first settlers to the present day is given in "Our American Money" by Joseph Coffin. Interesting and little-known facts about the first currency and the beginning of the United States mint are given.

To inspire in readers a healthy doubt about all economists to explain that the economic view of the everyday world is so different from that held by the average person that it must be translated to be understood, the book, "Getting and Spending" by Mildred Adams, was written. It is intended also to give the reader perspective on the rent, the cost of a loaf of bread, wages, and the like.

Yankee folk music that has come down through the generations to the present day is included in the collection, "Folk Songs of Old New England" by Eloise Hubbard Lincoln. Included are singing games and how they are played, the music and history of each; also country dances, how they are danced, sea chanteys and foxtrot songs, ballads, folk songs and ditties. The songs have been arranged with simple piano accompaniment, and many of the tunes have never been recorded and several of the songs never before collected.

GOODLAND for Mayor

Mayor Goodland Plays No Favorites

Appleton has grown and prospered, and its citizens have lived in harmony, largely because of its outstanding municipal government.

Mayor Goodland has seen to it that workingman and employer alike have been given fair treatment and encouragement. The policy of low taxation has eased the burden of the humble home owner as well as to prevent the "hamstringing" of the industries that provide jobs.

Every man who wants to work has been given public employment on approximately $2,000,000 worth of construction projects, or on WPA or taxpayers' projects, if unable to obtain private employment. Adequate standards have been maintained, because all paving and construction contracts have contained the clause enforcing the prevailing union wage scales and hours.

GET THE TRUTH

If you want the truth about taxes, compare your tax receipts for the years 1929 and 1939. They'll tell a convincing story.

TAKE NO CHANCES! Pay no attention to misleading last-minute propaganda too late to be answered. Be SURE of low taxes.

KEEP GOODLAND

Be sure you vote.

PAID ADVERTISEMENT. Authorized and $29.40 paid for by Goodland for Mayor Club, G. E. Massart, Treas., 420 N. Union St., Appleton, Wis.

His Record and His Platform

For twelve years as Mayor and assured if re-elected: Low taxes... sound finances expertly administered... efficient municipal service... major and minor improvements without burden on the taxpayer... good government... a balanced budget strictly adhered to... harmony, growth and progress... and much more to add to Appleton's fame nationally.

BLASTS 299

Henry Staedt hammered a 299 game during Grocers league matches at Elks alleys last week and is eligible for an A. B. C. award. Bits About Bowling

by Dick Davis

IT would never do to have more bowling alleys in Appleton. No, sir! Present facilities are entirely adequate and all local keggers are completely satisfied. We certainly hope the various reports of plans for new establishments won't materialize.

Just think what would happen. Young people could become interested in the sport and learn a game which they could follow for many years. More women could take up kegging and husbands and wife could bowl together once in a while. More leagues would be organized and more tournaments could be conducted here. No sir! It would never do to let the sport expand.

The deadline for entries in the City bowling tournament is at 12 o'clock tonight. If you haven't already entered, for heaven's sake don't tell you're team captain you'd like to take part in the event. There are too many entries already.

Bill Geenen, George Schwab and Earl Miller cleaned the 7-10 split with remarkable ease during recent matches. James Nolan wiped off the simple, but tricky, 1-7-10 setup and Mike Sakalaris did a free throw of the 4-7-10.

7-6-10. Royall LaRose was undaunted by the 4-7-8-9-10 and Tom Long cleared away the 5-7-10. Al Lienhen surprised the boys by cleaning the unusual 7-2-3-10.

Guy Marston was as cool as a cucumber as California clinched the title in the Western league at Elks alleys.

Neither Wally Gressens nor Eddie Starnard smoked a cigar while kegging this week.

Casey Stingle had his hook working like a charm and didn't have a blow all week.

Frank Fries rolled three gutter balls and Bob Nehls put two down the trough.

Extend Deadline For Cage Entries

Y.M.C.A. Ward Tournament Lists Will Close at 6 O'clock Tonight

With the deadline for registration in the Y.M.C.A. ward basketball tournament set at midnight at Saturday, March 30, a number of teams still are being organized and numerous requests are in to extend the deadline to Monday night.

It was decided to give those teams a chance to finish their organization over the weekend and the final deadline was set at 6 o'clock this evening. A number of wards that participated last year have their rosters partially completed and it was expressly for them that the committee extended the time.

Up to 10 o'clock Saturday night, 33 teams had officially registered, five less than a year ago. With the deadline extended it was the opinion of the management that the registrations would at least equal a year ago and possibly exceed it.

The teams registered to date are as follows:
Class A—Wards 5 and 8.

Class B—Wards 10, 14, 4, 12, 6, 13, 9, 8, 7 and 3.

Class C—Wards 10, 8, 16, 9, 13, 12, 4, 14, 3, 8 and 2.

Class D—Wards 9, 6, 1, 4, 15, 10, 2, 3, 5 and 7.

Competition will begin as originally planned with the first games starting on Tuesday afternoon. The complete pairings will appear in the Tuesday issue of the Appleton Post-Crescent.

An attempt will be made this year to select all stars from teams as an incentive for the players to do their best.

There will be no admission charge to any of the preliminary games.

Antigo Brothers Top Legion Doubles Event

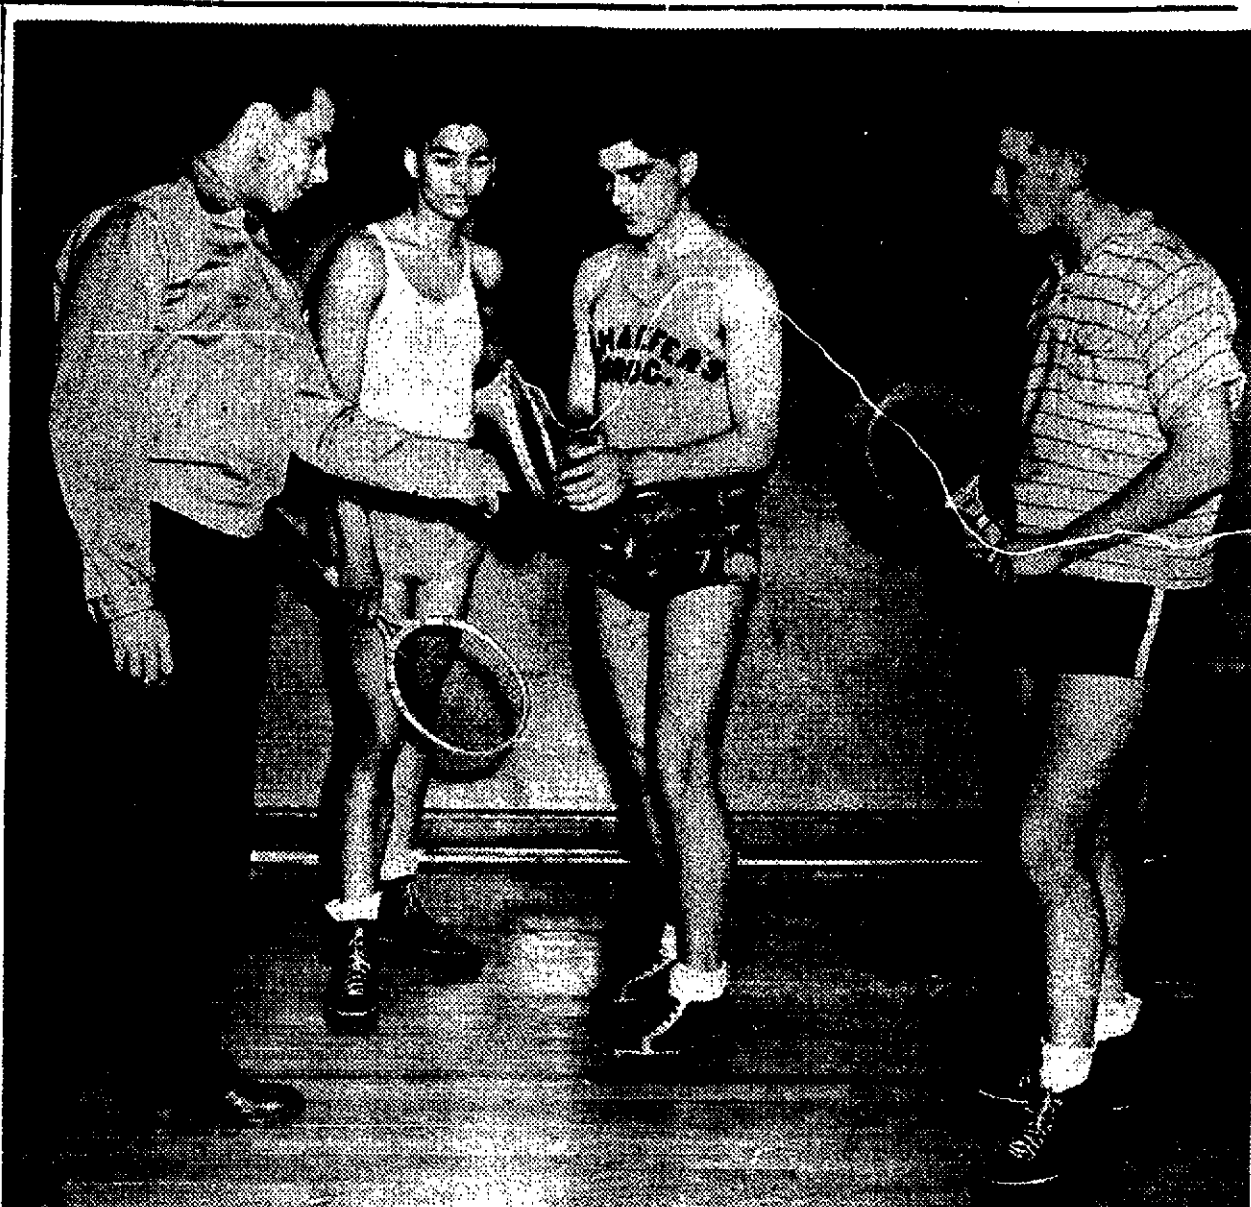

GREEN BAY—The Rouman brothers of Antigo shot into first place yesterday in the doubles event of the American Legion state bowling tournament with 1-216.

The Faerberbachs of Madison still hold first place in the team event with 3,067, and P. Boyd, of Green Bay, tops the singles with 671.

J. Hackett, of Madison, is the leader in the all-events on his total of 1,934.

TONY MARTIN SIGNED
Milwaukee—Tony (Clancio) Martin, Milwaukee's leading middleweight, has been signed to headline a boxing card here April 15.

Promoter Billy Mitchell said Tony's foe would be Young Jack Britton, Milo Theodorescu or Tommy Pallatin. Pallatin subdued for Martin at the recent Finnish relief card here and beat Theodorescu.

HIGH SCHOOL NETTERS UNPACK RACKETS FOR PRACTICE

Although tennis weather has not arrived Appleton High school netters are not waiting for the weather but are polishing up their games in the school gymnasium in preparation for their first match, with Shawano here April 6. Three likely prospects are shown above with their coach, Edgar Hagene, at the left. The squad's only letter man, William De Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray De Long, 1007 N. Appleton Tennis Team Will Meet Shawano April 6

William De Long Only Letterman Back for 1940 Squad

Coach Edgar Hagene's Appleton High school tennis squad will attempt to lift itself out of the net doldrums when it meets Shawano High school here Saturday, April 6.

The tennis season opened officially for the boys last Thursday with the first indoor practice session. Last year was the first year for tennis as a major sport at the high school and the team didn't do so well against more experienced squads in this area.

Prospects this year are not too bright but Coach Hagene hopes to develop a squad that will win a fair percentage of its matches. The only letterman back this year is William De Long, who will form the nucleus for this year's 6-man team.

Wesley Morris and John Trautmann, both mainstays of last year's team, were graduated last June and are lost to the squad. Coach Hagene is pinning his hopes on De Long, Robert Bayley, a likely looking senior, Nick Nickasch, a junior, and Lloyd Gatz, a senior. All of these boys have seen varsity play.

The team's first match will be a real test for the Shawano team as its key man, Billy Reed, an all-around athlete and one of the state's best men with a racket. A return match will be held at Shawano April 27.

Also scheduled are home and away matches with Menasha High school Tuesday, April 30, and Friday, May 3; Oshkosh here, Tuesday, May 7; Oshkosh there, Saturday, May 12; and home and away matches with Neenah Tuesday, May 21, and Tuesday, May 28. The team will enter a conference meet Saturday, June 1.

Seniors seeking berths on the team are Olin Mead, James Sherry, Robert Feuerstein, James Campbell, Gatz, Bayley, Tom Nolan, and Russell Volkman. Juniors who reported for practice are Con Hamer, Ervin Volkman, James Germanson, De Long, Donald Strutz, Kenneth Thompson, William Morris, Robert Hart, La Vern Nymoen, Lloyd Muellier, William Kohn and Nickasch.

Appleton Teams Roll In State Jacc Meet

Fifteen Appleton Junior Chamber of Commerce keggers competed in the state Jacc tournament at Manitowoc Sunday but failed to do much in the way of top honors. A team composed of Clarence Miller, Gordon Anderson, H. L. Davis, Jr., Dave Meringoff and Wilmer Gruett totaled 2,461 to eleventh place.

Another team was composed of Jack Notebaart, Harold Stout, Harvey Sackett, Max Kneip and Martin Strubeel. Members of the third team were Dale Fox, Lee Rosholt, Roland Nock, Erban Marr and Jerry Harder.

Davis and Stout topped the Appleton delegation in doubles competition with a score of 1,072.

Venzke and Paavo Nurmi Steal Show at Garden

BY SID FEDER
NEW YORK—(AP)—The spotlight's dazzling eye picked out a shiny baldhead and a slick black head of hair, and blase Madison Square Garden, which has seen them all from girl softball teams to heavyweight champions, rocked with the crowd's roar.

Oh, sure, the walls rattled plenty with applause when little Greg Rice, the ex-Notre Dame, came winging home with a new world three-mile record in 13 minutes, 52.3 seconds last night; when Allan Tolmich, the Detroit jack-rabbit, posted two new hurdlie marks; when Georgetown's Al Blozis upset shot-put standards; and when Tais-to-Maki, the new flying Finn, broke the books for 2 1/2 and 2 1/4 miles.

But taking it by and large, the 14,000 sets of sore tonils sported today by the folks who turned out for the Finnish relief fund track show were largely the fault of Paavo Nurmi, and the veteran Pennsylvania board-pounder, Gene Venzke. Both of them ran a little neither won anything. Yet, the folks cheered them as if they were smashing records.

You remember, old Paavo, of course. He used to break a record, at one distance or another, almost before each meal back in the roaring '20s. Well sir, old Paavo came home last night. He hadn't been on those Garden boards in 11 years, and he felt so good about it, he just had to put on a track suit and take a four-lap turn.

Venzke trotted out for the mile and a half run, against Chuck Fonske, Walt Mehl, of Wisconsin, and Ralph Schwarzkopf, of Michigan. The announcer said, "Say howdy to Gene Venzke, folks." And how they did. Gene stayed in the running right to the finish, but he was no match for Fonske and Schwarzkopf, who wound up in front in that order.

From a competitive standpoint, the feature event, the three-mile grind, was the high spot. Rice went to work a lap and three-quarters from home, sprinted all the way to the wire and finished 10 yards in front of Don Lash, with Maki back another five. His mark of 13:52.3 compared with the listed world mark of 13:56.2.

Hogan's Putter Is Still Blazing Hot

Ben Wins $1,200 First Prize at Asheville; 3rd Straight Win

BY BILL BONI
Asheville, N. C. (AP)—It is singularly inappropriate to be writing about Ben Hogan on All Fool's day. For the last two weeks we have been watching young Hogan work a major miracle, and he certainly has been nobody's fool.

He won the $1,200 first prize in the "land of the sky" open golf tournament yesterday. It was his third straight victory. It brought his earnings over that stretch to $3,400. It made him No. 1 man in that respect with $6,438 for his winter's efforts to $6,152 for Jimmy Demaret.

It made him No. 1 man in the eyes of his rivals, too. They might make cracks about the fact that the Greensboro and Asheville tournaments were played under winter rules. But the fact remained that they had the same opportunities under those conditions; that Hogan was 34 under par for 216 holes, setting new records with each of his triumphs, and, finally and most conclusively, that Hogan had only two three-putts greens in his 216.

Because of that brilliant putting streak, we thought the Sunday golfers might like to know the Hogan secret. The secret is, there isn't any.

"I've just been keeping the face of that putter dead upright, and headed straight for the hole," said Ben yesterday after coming off the 18th yesterday and his eighth straight under-70 round and a 273 total.

Temperature at 44 Above This Noon: 24-Hour Minimum Is 27

Clean, cool weather reigned today as the March page was turned back or torn off the calendar to make way for April.

March didn't live up to the tradition of coming in like a lamb and going out like a lion. The week-end brought pleasant weather. Car rides and sidewalk strolls were the popular activities yesterday afternoon, despite a wind that was a trifle on the chilly side.

The All Fools' day was marked by the usual jesting and horse-play among the populace. Children pulled gags on unsuspecting parents, people called to windows found nothing unusual outdoors, and the weary wouldn't believe a thing as April started its 30-day stretch.

Appleton's supply of snow continued to dwindle rapidly as temperatures maintained melting levels.

Generally fair tonight and tomorrow, with little change in temperature, is the forecast for Appleton and vicinity issued today by the Milwaukee weather bureau.

The thermometer atop the Post-Crescent building registered 44 degrees at noon, the same as yesterday's maximum, and 27 at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

For the 24-hour period ended at 9 o'clock this morning, the lowest reading was 27, at 6 o'clock this morning. Abilene, Tex., with 95, and Park Falls, with 20, stood at the top and bottom of the nation's thermometer yesterday.

THE WEATHER

Forecast for Wisconsin: Generally fair tonight and Tuesday; not much change in temperature.

General Weather Conditions: Rain or snow has fallen since Sunday morning over the northern states and sections of the Lake region, and the Rocky mountain states and the southern Pacific coast, but generally fair weather prevailed this morning over nearly all the central and plains states.

Temperatures were generally near the seasonal normal this morning over nearly all the central states and the northern Rocky mountains, but it was quite cool over central Canada.

Generally fair weather is expected in this section during the next 24 hours, with continued mild temperatures.

Temperatures: (Lowest and highest temperatures in 24 hours preceding 9 a.m. today)

tations of neutrality which give all the advantages to the aggressor."

Chief interest centered in possible further steps to keep Germany merchantmen from using Norwegian waters as a lane through which to transport Swedish iron ore to feed the Nazi war machine.

It was generally accepted that this leak in the allied blockade had been given careful study by the war council.

The British press, endorsing Churchill's warning to neutral states, clamored for measures to make the blockade more effective, and pointed to increased exports from America to Germany's neutral neighbors.

Tightening of the contraband control by "rationing" imports of neutrals on the basis of their normal needs was suggested as one means of meeting this situation.

The press also pointed out by means of maps, other leaks in the blockade, namely, the transportation of Russian oil across the Black sea and "backdoor" shipments from Vladivostok by way of the Trans-Siberian railway.

The foreign office denied reports in Balkan diplomatic quarters that the allies had obtained permission from Turkey to send warships through the Dardanelles into the Black sea to close this oil route.

New Farm Bill to Reduce Interest Rates on Loans

Senators Bankhead, Jones, LaFollette and Wheeler Favor Law

BY W. B. RAGSDALE

Washington—(P)—Take it from Senator Bankhead (D-Ala.), the sole purpose of the new farm credit bill is to reduce the interest rates on farm loans and help the young farmer buy a home.

The senator, after several years of pushing measures to help farm tenants buy their homes, took a look at the accumulated millions in the agencies of the farm credit administration and at the interest rates charged for those millions when the farmer wanted to borrow, and decided something ought to be done about it.

He introduced a bill to cut the interest rates to three per cent and loosen foreclosure regulations. The house agriculture committee, in hearings on a companion bill by Chairman Jones (D-Tex.), has heard Secretary Wallace and various treasury officials.

Jones, keenly interested in the idea, is pushing the bill. Secretary Wallace, though saying it was not an administration bill, gave the measure his endorsement.

Behind the present measure lies the recollection of Senator Bankhead that when he was a youngster, almost any man who had courage, imagination and a will to work could go out and buy a farm. He put up his savings for a down-payment and set out to turn his sweat into property, paying for the farm out of his yearly earnings from the land. That is almost impossible of achievement now.

Bankhead, Jones and Senators LaFollette (Prog-Wis.) and Wheeler (D-Mont.) studied also the figures on farm tenancy, which they attributed to the fact that farmers were being forced by debts off their own lands. Then they had the bill drafted.

TOOK CENSUS

Almost 4,000 years ago, officers of the Egyptian government began making lists of people in certain parts of the land. It appears that Egypt was the first country ever to take a "census" of any kind.

A bit of Egyptian writing.

To take a census, the Egyptians had to know the art of writing. They had learned to write long before their first effort at a census. In early times their writing was made up of "picture-words." Later they set down simple outlines, or signs, which did about the same work as the letters of our modern alphabet. The Egyptians did not, however, have all the letter-sounds of our alphabet.

And the Lord spoke unto Moses saying, Take ye the sum of all the children of Israel, every male from 20 years upward, all that are able to go forth to war.

"Those that were numbered of the tribe of Reuben were 46,500. Those that were numbered of the tribe of Simeon were 59,300. Those that were numbered of the tribe of Judah were 74,600. The total given for the Israelites, not counting the Levites, was 603,550. If these were only men of fighting age, it would mean more than 2,000,000 Israelites, counting women and children.

Six months later, another census was made, and the number of 601,730 was reported. We are told that each man in the census had to give half a shekel to the church, and that the half-shekels were counted instead of the men.

After the Israelites reached the Promised Land, their king, David, ordered a new census, even though he knew the people did not like to be counted. David's census was spread over nine months and 20 days.

In the Book of Samuel, we read that "there were in Israel 800,000 valiant men who drew the sword, and the men of Judah were 500,000."

17 Officers Will Be Named Tuesday At Kaukauna Polls

Interest Is Centering on 3-Way Contest for Mayor's Post

Kaukauna — A vote expected to exceed last April's count by hundreds is anticipated tomorrow as Kaukauna citizens choose from among 28 candidates for 17 offices. Last year only 1,816 went to the polls, compared to 2,739 in April of 1938.

The 3-cornered mayoral contest is arousing the most interest, with all three candidates issuing statements to the voters last week-end. Mayor Lewis F. Nelson is opposed by Assemblman William J. Gantter and George C. Egan. Nelson has been mayor since named in a special election in the spring of 1937.

Raymond Nagel, alderman from the Fourth ward, is the only councilman who has no opposition. Frank Fernald, Fifth ward incumbent, is listed alone on the ballot, but Walter Kilgas, former Fifth ward alderman, has announced he is a "sticker candidate," and has distributed ballot stickers bearing his name.

Third Ward Contest
The hottest aldermanic contest is in the Third ward, where T. L. Seggelink, incumbent, is opposed by William J. Gantter, former alderman, and Al A. Hartzheim, running against him. Hartzheim formerly represented the Second ward in the council. George E. Proper, incumbent, and Frank Mitchell are in the field for Second ward alderman.

Each incumbent supervisor has a man running against him. Incumbents and aspirants are Louis Faust, Anton P. Berkner, First ward; J. B. Delbridge, Leo H. Schmalz, Second ward; Fred Konrad, Max H. Strich, Third ward; John N. Corcoran, Richard Lehrer, Fourth ward; Peter G. Reichel, Joseph F. Bayorgeon, Fifth ward.

Three candidates are seeking two vacancies on the board of education, Marshall Bayorgeon and Edward F. Renney, incumbents, and Frank M. Charlesworth.

Candidates with no opposition are Lester J. Brenzel, city clerk; Mrs. Mary Hooyman, city treasurer; Joseph Dietzler, city assessor, and Harry F. McAndrews, city attorney.

American People Still Want Allies to Whip Germany in War, Gallup Poll Shows

BY DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J. — Where are American sympathies today—after seven months of war in Europe? Have Americans been alienated by the British blockade and the halting of American mail?

Is the public more pro - Allies than it was at the outset, or not so much so?

With many Americans concerned about these questions—and with the belligerent governments themselves anxious to assess American sympathies—a nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates that there has been no change in the number favoring the Allies as compared with the first weeks of the war.

Half a year of blockades, of submarine and aerial warfare and diplomacy leave the American public in three main groups:

1. Those who favor the victory of England and France—by far the largest group. Despite the Allies' interference with American mails and despite the fact that Allied orders for cotton, tobacco and other farm goods have probably not come up to the American farmer's expectations, 84 per cent in every hundred in the Institute survey say their sympathies are with England and France. This is exactly the number who said they favored an Allied victory in the Institute's survey six months ago.

2. Those who favor Germany—an infinitesimal number, but important in any general picture of American sentiment today. Whereas about two persons in every hundred said they favored a German victory six months ago, approximately one in a hundred says so today.

3. Those who consider themselves "completely neutral"—a small group who refuse to take sides in any sense, favoring neither Germany nor the Allies. Fourteen persons in a hundred took this position six months ago, and approximately the same number take it now. Interestingly enough, city dwellers and persons in the lower income groups are more inclined to the "completely neutral" attitude than other classes of the population.

Changes in Intensity
In its two tests of the American public's sympathies the Institute put the identical question to corresponding cross-sections of the voters in each of the 48 states: "Which side do you want to see win the present war—England and France, or Germany?"

The results of these identical surveys are shown below:

	Today	6 Months Ago
Want Allies to Win 84%		84%
Want Germany to Win	1	2
Completely Neutral
No Choice or No Opinion	15	14

But if few voters have changed sides since the war began, there have nevertheless been important changes in the intensity with which Americans have come to regard the Allied and German causes.

Asked, "Do you feel more sympathetic or less sympathetic toward that side today than you did when the war began?" one voter in every six (17%) says that he is less sympathetic to England and France than he was.

In this connection few mention the British blockade, the stoppage of American mails or the sharp curtailment of British tobacco purchases in the United States. Instead they comment that "I'm beginning to feel the Allies are nearly as much to blame as Germany," that "the Allies aren't doing all they could to win the war," or that "they didn't do enough for Finland."

Significantly, too, most frequent criticisms of the Allies on these grounds come from younger citizens—persons between the ages of 21 and 30.

But for every persons who feels less sympathetic toward the Allies today, nearly two persons say they feel "more sympathetic," so that England and France have been the net gainers in the tug-of-war for American support. The increasing intensity of pro-Ally sentiment is accounted for by three main factors, the comments show.

(1) The war is apparently not going as well as expected for England and France, (2) increasing dislike for Germany's tactics in the war and her rule of conquered Polish territories, and (3) a growing belief that England and France are fighting for a principle that is important to America.

The actual vote of those favoring England and France is as follows:

More Sympathetic	28%
Less Sympathetic	17
Just the Same	55

Still Oppose U. S. Entry

In its general sympathies for the Allied side, American public opinion obviously supports much of what U. S. Minister to Canada James H. R. Cromwell told an Ottawa audience a fortnight ago in a speech that drew a blunt public rebuke from Secretary of State Cordell Hull. What a majority of American voters would not agree with, however, was the suggestion which many observers thought they saw in Mr. Cromwell's speech that the United States should enter the war on the Allied side.

All Institute tests on this subject since the war began have shown only a small minority of U. S. voters in favor of repeating our World War role this time. In the Institute's most recent survey on the question less than 4 per cent of those interviewed said they would approve "declaring war on Germany and sending an army and navy abroad to fight."

If the Allies should appear to be losing 55 per cent in a recent survey said they would favor lending them money, but only 23 per cent said they would be in favor of entering the war and sending troops in such a case.
